Ike's Tale

Dear Star Readers:

The cool days of autumn air here and the leaves is changing to crimson and gold—getting ready fur winter. Sal has bin picking cotton round over the county and has got enough saved up to git her a dress an 4 bales of snuff. I dug the taters and hilled 'em up and toted in the pumpkins and put them under the bed—getting ready fur winter.

Hit air a favored land in which we live—all of us has lots to be thankful fur—and rite smart to cuss about. The seasons air alright and the climate is good—blessings from the Hand of Providence.

But all over the land thar is a set of folks that purty nigh pester the life outen a-body; it's these everlasting fellers that air allers a-comin around tryin to colect what you owe 'em—a curse sent out by the hand of Satan, Sal sez.

I bet more than fifty people has axed me to pay 'em what I owe, in the last three weeks. I guess if they knowed how tired I git of hearing about what I owe they'd hush about hit—but I don't know, they might not, fur some folks haint got no manners. Hit wuz that way over in Rutherford county whar me an Sal use to live, and they jist kept on ater us till me moved away to get rid of 'em. Sal sez we will have to leave Casar if they don't let us alone, but I don't want to go.

Tuther da Lon Britain told me to come round behind his stoar, he wanted to talk to me. I went joyfully fur I wuz jist shore that he had a jug full of the kind that me and Dr. John Buff uses—but when I got around thar whar Lon wuz I didn't see a drop of liquor of no sort and he wuz vulgar enough to ax me to pay him fur that fat-back me an Sal consumed while making our crop this year.

I took out claim and delivery papers to make Lon let me alone till I could git to Shelby to see a lawyer—hit weren't Hoel I seed but he wuz most as good fur he told me I could git out of hit if I'd swear that every time I took out a piece of that fat-back Sal wud reach over an snatch hit offen my plate an eat hit herself against the peace and dignity of the state.

Sal did do me jist that way all last summer and hit wuz the direct cause of the biggest fights I wuz ever in.

Now if anybody else wants to try to colect what I owe 'em let 'em come up and give me thier hand and say whether or not they are related to either me or Sal by blood or marriage. After that they can have thier claims filed agin our estate, or sue an git judgment which ever they like.

They air certain to lose in either case, but I like fur everybody to take thier choice.

"When shall our sorrows have an end.
Our joys when shall we see."
IKE.
