By Renn Drum

Melvin Peeler, the former Shelby high star, will be back at his old end berth when Duke university plays Boston college this week, according to Durham dispatches. Young Peeler parted with several teeth and received some bad bruises in the Navy game, but as fans here who recall his local play know, it will take more than a few missing teeth to keep that boy out of the game. It was that same fighting spirit which won him a berth on the DeHart team despite the fact that he weighs less than any man in the line—in football it isn't all in just how much you weigh; on occasions it's the stuff that pushes the scales up.

Misses Helen Frances Given Party
Mr. and Mrs. Coley Buy
Home. Personals.

(Special To The Star.)

We are very sorry to learn that Mr. and Mrs. Will Eters are both real sick at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Coley of Danville, Va., have recently purchased a house and lot on South Washington street.

Quite a number of young people enjoyed a party at the home of Miss Helen Frances Saturday night. All reported a nice time.

Mr. Grady Bright from N. C. Sanatorium has been transferred to the Shelby hospital for a tonsillitis operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Gardo and children spent the week-end with his brother at Spartanburg, S. C.

Miss Loree Walker from G. W. C. at Greenville, S. C., spent the week-end here with relatives.

Miss Isoline Wilson spent last Friday night with Mrs. John Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Cook spent the run, he kept his feet and actually kicked out of the burly end's grip and then ran right through another would-be tackler. He has an amazing aptitude for hopping over a line. There is something primitively cruel and heartless about the way he walks over his mates to get free.

"Half a dozen times Saturday he climbed over men who'd been knocked to their knees, leaping up to their backs and then hurling his slim little body through some hole that appeared before him. He did those things so quickly that there was no turning him back. He saw holes in a flash and he went into them, feet flying, black shocked head lunging forward, slim shoulders twisting.

"Unbelievable power, a quickness of foot, eye and body that is nothing short of uncanny and a sense of timing that seems never to betray him make Booth the football player he is. He moves so quickly that his very speed generates the power that carries him over obstacles. And if there are those who believe he'll be battered into failure, they're wrong. Not once in all the times he was tackled last Saturday did he land under a pile. He simply twisted out from beneath the falling tacklers and leaped to his feet even before those who downed him, to their obvious chagrin."

This Albie Booth.

The newest of the Yale stars, little Albie Booth, did not appear so hot to Shelby football followers who saw him in action against Georgia, but in out-stepping the great Gable to lead Yale to a victory over Army, Booth became a hero, one of Yale's greatest.

That he must be good, really good, is the impression to be gained from the following description of him by Dick Williams in the New York World:

"It's hard to believe that Booth is a football player of the stature he's proved himself. He's such a little shaver. He's another Frank Hinkley, come out of the beyond. Hinkley was such a man, little, slender, made of whipcord and fury. Out of those deep set, blazing pools that served as eyes for him, blazed the unquenchable fire of a football zealot, unbeatable, mystifying.

Different Temperament.

"Booth is a Hinkley only in stature. There is none of the animal ferocity in him that flamed in Hinkley's narrow breast. There is none of that sallowness of cheeks, none of that burning passion for victory that eventually consumed Frank Hinkley and took him to an early grave. There is none of the savage emotionalism that gripped Hinkley's soul and drove him to deeds of strength far beyond his puny physical equipment.

"Hinkley's was a spiritual gift, an emotional capacity that lifted him out of his poor body and projected him into another world. If he walked on the field weighing 140 pounds, hollow chested and sunken cheeked, he metamorphosed at once into a giant with a giant's strength. His thin little arms vices of banded steel. When the game was over he was a weakling again, exhausted, crying alone in his little corner of the then shabby dressing rooms, shunning his own team-mates, asking only to be left to his emotions.

"Booth is a different type. He has spirit, elan, poise. He trots onto the field with short, quick steps that betoken a dynamo of unsurpassable speed. He runs with his head a little forward. He wears no stockings over his slender legs, so that one looks at those legs and marvels at the power concealed therein. It seems, when he rips through a line and lunges ahead with half a dozen tacklers hanging onto him, that those legs would bend and buckle and snap.

"In the first place, he starts faster than any back in the world. He is under way almost before you can see him move. And he is quick as forked lightning on his feet. He skips aside while running at full speed. He hobs up beyond a line and changes direction in the bat of an eye. No slinking, deceiving Pollard-like tactics with him. You know how rapidly he's moving, but you can't do anything about it. He moves before human hands can move after him.

Power In Running.

"The power with which he runs is his most amazing feature. Up in the Yale Bowl on Saturday he carried half a dozen Army giants with him over a dozen yards on at least two plays. Tackled from behind by the powerful Carlmark on one long

Alfalfa For Hogs.

Hogs are supposed to be so constituted that they can not economically digest dry hay or fodder, but alfalfa is an exception. Hogs will not eat alfalfa hay readily at first, but after becoming accustomed to it they relish a limited quantity, especially hay made from plants cut at an early stage. Alfalfa hay added to the grain ration reduces the cost of grains and is good for the hogs. Alfalfa is especially good for brood sows.

-have you driven
a Chevrolet Six?

Have you felt the thrill of its six-cylinder performance—so smooth, quiet and vibrationless that you almost forget there's a motor?

Have you known the satisfaction of its six-cylinder reserve power—ready to shoot you ahead at the traffic light, to carry you over the steepest hills, or to speed you along the highway?

And do you know that anyone who can afford any car can own a Chevrolet Six?

A Ride tells a Wonderful Story!

If you have never driven a six-cylinder car, it is impossible for you to form any idea of Chevrolet performance from your imagination alone.

Smoothness! No rumble in the body—no tremble in the steering wheel—no vibration to loosen windows and doors!

Flexibility! Power that flows in a silken stream—and never a trace of "lugging"!

Quiet! Hardly a whisper from the motor. You can drive it for hours without the slightest noise fatigue!

But why try to tell you the story when only a ride can give you the facts? Come in. There's a car waiting for you... Now!
