

New Religion In Making In New York

Forming In New York City, It Puts "Humanism" First, Based On Common Sense Belief.

A new religion without creeds, clergy, prayers, baptism and other sacraments and rites that are a part of all established religions, has been organized in New York City under the name of the "Humanist Society." Lectures will be substituted for sermons. And good music, sacred or secular, will be used in services.

The founder of this new, liberal church, Dr. Charles F. Potter, defines it as a religious movement that will attempt to teach people how to get along together. Its prime object is to meet human need. Dr. Potter was 25 years a minister in the Unitarian church from which he has resigned to head the new sect.

This movement is to become nationwide, Dr. Potter announces. Branches at Minneapolis under Dr. John Dietrich and in Chicago under Dr. Curtis Reese, are being set up. Other cities are asking for organizers.

It is the hope of the founder and his associates that practical, common sense shall be applied in the working out of details of the new denomination. The marriage ceremony is an example. It will be an informal, individual agreement, based upon vows set down by the man and woman who want to become husband and wife.

"People who are marrying have a right to understand the contract they are making," Dr. Potter declares. "How can they if they hear only an ecclesiastical ceremony cluttered up with theological verbiage, or a legal agreement bound down with legal technicalities? Take for instance, 'Therunto I plight thee my troth.' What does that mean?" Dr. Potter would have the man and woman both write out, simple, understandable vows under the counsel of the church official performing the ceremony. For the man a statement something like this is suggested: "I pledge I will live with Mary Smith, that I will respect her rights, treat her as a person and not property and be fair and square with her in all things."

An equally simple vow in writing is to be made by the woman. Nothing is to be said about the two becoming one, or about either obeying the other.

The first meeting to organize the new denomination was held in a hall seating 360. It was crowded full and 500 persons were turned away. Of those who got in 275 signed cards acknowledging interest in the new movement and 166 applied for charter membership.

Perhaps all these people are genuinely interested in this new religious movement. The fact of greater significance is that it indicates the people of great cities, contrary to common belief, are still very much concerned about religion as a whole.

Boiling Springs Stars Hurt; May Be Out Of Game Here Saturday

Buck Coble Injured In High Point Vaughn Also, Caldwell May Play.

Two regular line players, one of whom is Buck Coble, last year's captain, may be out of the Boiling Springs lineup here tomorrow, Saturday, afternoon when the Baptist eleven battle Wingate college on the Sheldridon.

Coble was hurt in the High Point game last week and has been out of practice all this week with something resembling a rupture. Vaughn, big guard and one of the towers of the strength in the forward wall, hurt his hip in the same game and will not be able to play tomorrow.

Hurts Rackley Chances.

The likelihood that both of these veterans will be unable to play will hurt the Boiling Springs chances of victory over the strong Wingate team. Coach Blainey Rackley has a small enough squad when all of the players are in good shape and with a couple of his best ones out he is in a predicament. Linemen of the Coble-Vaughn calibre are not made in a week's time, and if they were, the Boiling Springs coach hasn't any great amount of extra material out of which to make of players that his chances of winning were endangered. One back was put out of the game, another was hurt, and a third was playing such rotten football that the old Deacon star wanted to bench him but he didn't have a substitute to send in. Now with two out before the Wingate game gets underway Rackley can only hope for about eleven iron men who can go the entire route.

One Cheery Spot.

One cheery thing about the situation is that Jim (Big Six) Caldwell, one of the best prep school tackles in the Carolinas, is now at Boiling Springs and Rackley may use him Saturday in the line at Coble's berth. Of course Caldwell hasn't been playing with the junior Baptists long enough to get working good with the team and fully familiar with the signals, but Big Six knows enough football plays to figure one game out for himself. Once Coble gets over his injury Boiling Springs will have three tackles, the ex-captain. Doc Moore and Caldwell, equal to the tackles on any college team in the state—and that goes for the Big Five eleven. Wingate, generally speaking, was a slight favorite to win Saturday's game and with two Boiling Springs regulars out the odds should be more in favor of the Union county junior college eleven. But those who have been keeping an eye on the development of the junior Baptists will not be at all surprised to see Boiling Springs win—and by two touchdowns.

Albie Booth's Brother Made Him Grid Star

Older Brother Saw High Hope For Glory Fade Then Started Helping Kid Brother.

New Haven, Conn.—Three years ago Harvard and Yale were fighting bitterly to break a scoreless tie. On the sidelines sat a senior, Bill Booth, a nice dropkicker, an accurate and strong passer and a capable ball carrier. From the stands came the cry:

"Givus Booth! We want Bill Booth!"

Another man was given the chance. Bill Booth sat there on the sidelines and watched the game end in a tie, 0 to 0. It was his senior year. His chance for fame had gone.

That Bill Booth was the big brother of little Albie Booth, Yale's football idol of the day. And it was Bill who taught Albie the football arts in which little Albie shows so much proficiency today.

Bill took the disappointment of not being allowed to win that game for Yale, and took it like a man. He drilled Albie in punting and drop-kicking and forward passing. There were tricks of broken field running that Bill knew, too. Day after day Bill tolled with the kid, building him up physically for the day when Albie would go to Yale. It was Bill who urged that Albie spend two or three years at Milford Academy under the wise guidance of Coach Bill Lovell.

Albie Booth was prepared soundly for the gridiron glory he was to win.

The Booths are a family in medium circumstances. They live in part of a three-family frame house at 626 Dixwell street, here. Albert J. Booth, sr., the father of Bill and Albie, is a polisher in the manufacturing plant of the Winchester Arms company.

Father and Mother Booth often denied themselves little things so that Bill and Albie could go through college. But both boys have helped themselves by working to defray the expenses.

Albie's proud parents relate that the young man made his first sensation open-field run when he was nine months old. Restless, he clambered over the side of his crib—head first, just as every other natural athlete would have done it. He crept through the bedroom, the parlor, the dining room—into the kitchen and pushed open two doors on the way. To Mother Booth, of course, that fact stands out just as importantly as his slashing, twisting dashes in the Yale Bowl.

The kid's first job was selling newspapers, after the school day at Ivy street grammar school had ended. Later he went to work for the same dairy company that had employed Bill during his college days. He was employed by a meat packing company last summer and in 1926. His job was packing pork, operating the bacon slicer and finally supervisor in the baking department.

Albie set a precedent in Yale freshman history when he was chosen as captain of the football, basketball and baseball teams. It was his ability as a ball carrier this year that finally resulted in rejection of the Warner system at Yale after the Georgia disaster. Under the Warner double-wing back formation, Albie would have been expected to take his turn in running interference, a job he was deemed too light for.

Booth, sr., never misses a game. Last year, during the Harvard-Yale freshman game, they had to hold him in the stands when a couple of Harvard frogs got rough with Albie.

SICK AT HIS STOMACH

"I WAS suffering from stomach trouble in 1917," says Mr. C. K. Nelson, a railroad engineer living in Pulaski, Va. "I had a tightness in my chest, a shortness of breath. There seemed to be a heavy weight in the pit of my stomach, and quite a bit of nausea, yet I couldn't vomit. I tried different remedies, yet suffered on just the same. When in West Virginia on a work train, I was in such a condition that I just gave up and came home. I could not stand to work, in my condition. Some one told me about Black-Draught. I started taking it in small doses after meals. It helped me, and I went back to work."

WOMEN who need a tonic should take CARDOL in one or two days.

In Keeping with its Fine Car Engineering Standards OLDSMOBILE PROVIDES PRESSURE LUBRICATED PISTON PINS

A feature

Incorporated in the construction of Oldsmobile's big 62-horsepower engine are many features which have long been considered marks of high quality in automobile power plants.

Piston pins, for example, are pressure lubricated through connecting rods which are rifle-drilled throughout their entire length. Serving as connections between rods and pistons, the pins act constantly as bearing surfaces under great strain. The stress imposed by compression and combustion is enormous, and, to assure smoothness and long life, piston pins must be perfectly lubricated. And the only positive method of lubrication is by direct pressure from the oil pump through crank-characteristic of high-priced cars shaft and connecting rods. According to specifications shown in the July issue of "Motor," only twelve makes of cars, in addition to Oldsmobile and Viking, offer this feature—and the majority of these are priced above $2000. In Oldsmobile, all main, connecting rod, and camshaft bearings are also lubricated under pressure. This highly efficient method of lubrication is important to the buyer who seeks real motor car value—because it contributes to quiet operation and long life. Many other quality features include controlled cooling; engine driven fuel pump; counter-balanced crankshaft; and engine protection afforded by oil filter, air cleaner, gasoline strainer, and crankcase ventilation.

These important advantages characterize Oldsmobile as a thoroughly fine motor car. Come in today and examine the car. Drive it yourself. Discover to your own satisfaction how much Oldsmobile's fine-car construction contributes to the excellence of Oldsmobile's performance.
