

Long Skirts Put Emphasis On Shoes

New York.—In a subtle way the increased length of dresses has emphasized the importance of shoes. Feet twinkle and are silhouetted against trains. The shoe has become a living part of the pattern of the costume. It continues its line.

Footwear often matches bag, gloves or some other accessory. Where the dress is detailed, it is simple. It complements and emphasizes line and mood.

For afternoon a development is the dressy shoe, either for street or home. Morning and sport clothes can no longer be worn through the afternoon. As shadows lengthen, so do the dresses. The long dress demands a dignified, special shoe.

An example is a very chic pair of moire Oxfords I saw recently. Their outline was decidedly feminine and smart, with high heels. A narrow trim line of silver kid stressed the cut of these shoes. Obviously they were for neither morning nor night, but this new time of day that's just been discovered.

Combinations of Materials. Suede has come into its own because of its lovely texture. It lends itself to any number of clever treatments and is especially smart with kid. Kid tips on toes often have perforations in arabesques.

Reptile with its unbeatable service record is perennially good. Beside being repeated in the class opera pump, it is mated with kid and other leathers with very fascinating results.

Many designers of sandals are studying the ancient Greek original nals and introducing throngs, lacings, straps and similar classic ideas. But for general beach wear the simple one-strap, cut out shoe, with open shank and low heels is the most eminently practical. With pajamas and in Southern resorts, sandals retain the cut out feature but become extremely sophisticated, with higher heels and embroidery, etc.

Kid, fabrics and various leathers are made up for sandals in all colors, and combinations of colors. For the beach Visca Straw is a find. It sheds sand and is extremely light.

And Now For Sport. Spectator shoes have Cuban heels. The Colonial pump is smart, the Prince of Wales is with us still in force. Brown and white seems to succeed better than black and white. For active sports, practically is the first consideration. But many heavy shoes are cut so that they are really flattering, and heavy rubber soles are incredibly flexible.

Evening slippers match the dresses they are with, or, in some cases, contrast with the gown and match the accessories. Many of them are designed so that they may be dyed two colors, as when satin and moire are used in the same slipper so that the two can be dyed different shades. The new dahlia tones are particularly good. Gold brocades dance gaily under long skirts.

Narrow gold and silver kid overlaps trace variegated designs. They often continue in tiny straps across the instep. Buckets are small, and for strapless slippers are generally placed at the outer side of the foot. Spike heels are general for evening.—Honore Booth.

MIXING AFFAIRS CHURCH, STATE IS DEPLORABLE SAYS

Minister Sees Too Much Political Interest In Church And Declines To Withdraw.

Atlanta.—Rev. T. J. Branson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church south, at Madison, Ga., in a statement published announced he had withdrawn from the church because of "politics in the polity and the polity in politics."

Rev. Mr. Branson, who has been a Methodist minister for 25 years said that "it may be assumed that in the church, extending over two decades, would not wish to change his relationship by withdrawal without what seemed to him sufficient and satisfactory reasons."

"I am divergent from the Methodist church as to polity and Biblical interpretation. Second, and unusual opportunity to enter a more congenial field of activity, these in conjunction have determined my present course. Conditions discussed in this communication are known to all who are familiar with the political possibilities inherent in the polity of the Methodist church.

Unrest Prevalent. "The things here affirmed are being discussed in public and in private by men high and low among the ministers of the church, as also among the membership who are restive and in revolt against a bondage intolerable among them."

"The Methodist system in times past has been the storm center of agitation for modification by limitation. Today there are storm signals that presage rough weather and high seas ahead. There are rumblings that portend earthquake and subsidence of the Episcopal system.

"What is the cause of this insurgency throughout the church? What ails her preachers and her people? The answer is easy. In a nutshell, it is politics in the polity and the polity in politics. The former is the father of the latter. It is the sow in the spring from which flows the muddy stream. Political manipulation, resulting in domination, is bound up with the organization and administration of its polity. Too too great a strain on human nature."
