 Despite all of the prosperity talk which has emanated from the White House and other government agencies, Mr. Hoover is faced with a declining business condition and he is seeking to avoid a further drop by urging construction work. The plan is laudable for those states and subdivisions which need improvements but it is not sound reasoning for those states which can't afford further improvements or which don't need them.

EMPIRE BUILDER'S SON TO WRITE HILL'S LIFE.

St. Paul.—Bringing to light traits of his father, James J. Hill, the "empire builder," is the task set for himself by Louis W. Hill.
 Louis Hill has retired from the management of the Great Northern railroad, built by his father, and after research, will write a biography of the pioneer railroad builder.
 For the first time since the Great Northern was built it is without a Hill in an important executive position. Louis began 36 years ago while his father still was the guiding hand. His retirement was from the chairmanship of the board of directors.

 To The Star:
 South Shelby is growing fast, and there is a lot of building work being done. Miss Selma Webb is doing a great work with the South Shelby school, and I think Mr. Smith is the very superintendent we needed, I am going to Graham school. Mr. Randolph is the principal and Miss Wilkins is my teacher. I like her fine.
