Knees Are Banned On Co-Ed Campus

Moscow, Idaho.—Willy Nilly, University of Idaho co-eds are going to be in style. They are under orders to cover up their knees before returning to school after the Christmas recess.

Miss Perneal French, dean of women, announced the edict at a meeting of representatives of sororities and girls' dormitories. The dean said "measures will be taken" to enforce the order.

Postoffice And Civil Service

From The Asheville Times.
Some better days in the American experiment of self-government dreamers may be vindicated by the elimination of politics from the details of tariff-making, from the prohibition bureau and from the postoffice department. But progress in that direction is painfully slow.

President Hoover is ambitious to expand the work of Cleveland, Roosevelt and Wilson in the civil service by placing all third class postmasters under the civil service. But the spoils system yields only slowly to the demands for economy and efficiency in the public organism. It remains to be seen whether congress will share the president's concern over the ever-recurring deficit in the postal department and accept his recommendation as one long step towards post-office self-sufficiency.

Aged Ministers Get Duke Money

Durham, Dec. 18.—Dr. W. P. Few, president of Duke university, announced today in behalf of the Duke endowment and in the name of the university that 213 checks totaling $32,000 had been mailed to superannuated ministers of the North Carolina Methodist conferences and their families. Each year at this time these checks have been mailed along with the Christmas greetings from the Duke endowment and the university, and with a personal word from President Few.

The Christmas checks this year go to all sections of the state and the amounts are larger than ever before. The value of the individual checks is in proportion to the amounts allowed by the conference boards of finance. For some years before the founding of the Duke endowment, Mr. Duke each year set aside a considerable fund for retired ministers, and this will be continued permanently by the endowment.

At The Theatres

Carl Laemmle, of Universal, presents Hoot Gibson, still head of the big contingent of western stars, in "The Long, Long Trail" which is the headliner at the Webb today and tomorrow. It's a peach of a picture, an action thriller of the first rank. There is plenty of daring riding to thrill you, and plenty of fighting to tense you up. Hoot is to the manner born when it comes to putting over a real western dramatic episode.

Can you imagine a man being permitted to bind a woman to helplessness, place her inside an oven, apply a torch and burn her, in the presence of hundreds of people? Do you think this could not happen? Well, it can and it will, and right here in Shelby. If you are skeptical, we invite you to pay a visit to the Princess Theatre tonight, while the Mysterious Theatre company is occupying the stage. You will see Mr. Smith go through with the horrible torture described above and, while most of the crowd will probably squirm a bit, we feel sure that Mr. Smith will be permitted to perpetrate his dastardly crime without molestation.

BABY HELPS CO-EDS LEARN HOUSEKEEPING

Knoxville, Tenn.—A home with everything from a kitchen stove to a baby is provided for instruction of University of Tennessee co-eds.

Each year 30 seniors live three months in the "practice house," a two-story affair near the campus. They prepare their food, do all the work and manage the budget.

Some time ago girls then in the home adopted a baby, and succeeding classes have kept it. They feed, clothe and, later on, plan to send it to school.

It's a boy.
