FARMER FINDS HONEY SUPPLY IN HOME WALLS

Baltimore. — Harry Tucker, a prominent farmer of Queen Annes county, Maryland, has noticed thousands of bees hovering near his home recently. He called upon Albert Raleigh, a carpenter. Raleigh removed the planks from one side of Tucker's house and discovered 600 pounds of honey stored away in nooks and crevices.

The two men divided the eastern shore spoils. Local weather prophets say such a large quantity of honey is a sign of a hard winter.

A pass through the California mountains which was traversed by the Graf Zeppelin on its trip around the world has been named Eekener Pass in honor of the dirigible's commander.
