At The Theaters

The Webb advertises an under-seas romance for exhibition today and tomorrow—a piece entitled "Mysterious Island" starring no less a personage than Lionel Barrymore. The cast also includes Lloyd Hughes, Montagu Love and Jane Daly. This is a Metro-Goldwyn picture, revealing the mysteries of the deep—a production that is said to have cost a cold million, taking two years in the making. It is a picturization of Jules Verne's famous story—Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea.

"Romance of the Rio Grande" is the Carolina feature today and tomorrow, an all talking Fox movie-tone, starring Warner Baxter and Mary Duncan, a highly romantic love tale of the stirring border country. It is a picture of Spanish life, with all the color, charm and mystery that envelops the land to the south, a spectacle filled with vivid color and passionate temperaments. "Seven Keys to Baldpate," one of the most famous of productions, with Richard Dix, is billed for Monday and Tuesday. George M. Cohan made this play immortal, and the screen version is equally as good.

The Lyric is announcing the completion of a talking equipment, with the first production under this system due for a presentation today. Owing to the compactness of this playhouse, the talkie should prove a notable success, and prove a source of splendid entertainment for the patrons. The first talkie will be a Tiffany production, entitled "New Orleans," a romantic picture of the South, combining the charm of old Southern life, with the modern touch of musical comedy. It is on today and tomorrow. Meantime there is a stage production on the bill—"The Pep and Ginger Revue"—very peppy, novel and entertaining.

Burglars who stole jewelry worth $3,000 from Lady Jane Furness of London overlooked $120,000 worth of gems in her dresser.

J. R. Peters of St. Louis never knew he could swim until he jumped into the water and rescued his drowning son.
