Death Of Cleveland Officer Discussed

innocent, or a moonshiner bearing down upon an agent with a load of buckshot fired from ambush. The different varieties of tragedy, however, have all led to the same end—the spilling of human blood.

So far as the new method of claiming a human life goes, the Cleveland county incident leaves a number of questions open. The propriety of blocking a road is questionable. Whether the officers were uniformed or gave the occupants of the oncoming machine any inkling of their official identity is another topic for discussion. The authenticity of the tip upon which the officers were acting and the identification of the car which they stopped as the machine for which they were looking likewise must come under scrutiny.

Without passing judgment upon any one and admitting no knowledge of the tragedy except the meager press accounts, the Daily News, on the surface, imagines that any automobile driver, finding another car blocking the highway and seeing a group of men rushing in upon him as he slammed on his brakes to avoid a collision, would resort to right desperate means in an effort to make a getaway. That general observation is left for exceptions which may be noted upon the presentation of evidence in the case and extenuating circumstances which may be offered by fellow-officers of the fatally injured deputy. Was the act that of a law offender deliberately trying to escape or was it the move of an automobile driver rightfully terrified by a blocked highway and advancing men?

These questions are merely asked for the thought which they may provoke and the slant they offer upon the prohibition enforcement problem. The answers, we presume, will be given by the courts after full facts of the tragedy have been received and carefully weighed in the jury room.

"Nice People" Misled In the Red Movement

increase over 1925 when Department of Justice's post-war policy of keeping a close watch on Communist activities was discontinued. Questioning along this line was believed to have resulted from Ellhu Root's proposal that a Federal police force be detailed to keep Communists under observation.

Moscow is not sending money to America sympathizers with the Soviet regime, Wood said, but is giving orders. Funds for Communists leaders come from several sources, he went on. Among donors, he explained, were so-called "Parlor Pinks" whom he styled as "suckers." The names of these "pinks" often possessors of inherited wealth, decorate Communistic pamphlets, Wood said. Many of the pamphlets were introduced into evidence.

Gastonia Cause Just Strikes at times bring many contributions in sympathy for the oppressed lot of workers, Wood charged. He further alleged that strike leaders in the textile mills at Passaic, N. J., had collected $500,000 for relief work and had never made an accounting of this money.

Discussing the abortive strikes at Gastonia, N. C., Wood said that 1,000 "nice people" had been fighting a "just cause" but had been misled by Communist leaders.

The witness then charged, although offering no evidence to support his claims, that only two per cent of the money collected by the International Labor Defense and the Workers International Relief for the Gastonia defense fund had been used to help the strikers.

At the workers' school, Wood said, young men and women were trained for revolutionary leadership. They were instructed, he declared, to agitate principally in industrial communities where low wages provided fertile ground for their efforts.

"There is no communism in farming communities," he observed.

Democrats Of N. C. In Harmony Mood

are going to abide by the results of the primary. This fact has done a great deal to allay any feeling that might have existed among the Bailey supporters in favor of administering punishment to the Simmons followers, and has healed the breach all along the line.

The fact that approximately 50 per cent of the members of the new State Democratic committee are new, some 50 to 60 members of the old committee having been discarded by the recent State Democratic convention, so that the majority of the present membership belong to the group that supported Bailey, some thought the committee might sponsor a movement to punish all those who supported Senator Simmons. But while the recent convention evidently thought it was advisable to clean house in the committee, so that Chairman Mull might have a more harmonious organization, there is nothing to indicate any tendency in favor of punishing any one. And with Chairman Mull definitely opposed to any such move, there is virtually no likelihood that one will develop.

Chairman Mull, Governor Gardner and the other leaders in the party take the view that even if Democrats do differ in their individual views now and then, as they did before the recent primary, that they almost always accept the verdict of the primary as final and abide by the result, remaining good Democrats to the end. The result of this view is that they believe the outlook for the Democratic party in North Carolina now is better than it has been in years and that no discordant notes should be sounded by any one.
