

Late Emergency Hay Crops Advised By County Agent

Hay Crops Can Yet Be Sown to Advantage, Crops Suggested By Him.

(By R. W. Shoffner, Cleveland Farm Agent.)

Where it has been impossible to break land this summer for hay crops due to the drought an effort should be made to sow a late crop. There is still time to make hay crops from soybeans, sudan grass, and millet and from mixtures of these crops.

Where the land is fairly clean it will be sufficient to use a disc harrow and not break the land deep. Soybeans will produce good hay crops between now and frost, though not as heavy yields will be secured as if planted earlier.

The best varieties generally grown and for late planting in the season are listed below in order of preference, with the recommended rate of seeding in rows and broadcasts.

Rate of Seeding Per Acre.

Varley	30-in rows Broadcast or drill, solid
Hernando	3-4 to 1 bu. 2 bu.
Virginia	3-4 to 1 bu. 2 1-2 bu.
Tokyo	3-4 to 1 bu. 2 bu.
Mammoth
Yellow	1 bu. 2 bu.
Laredo	1-2 bu. 3-4 to 1 bu.

Beans planted in rows will produce as large yields of hay as those planted broadcast, and will contain less grass and weeds. I would recommend planting them in rows as seed are scarce and the cost is less to plant in rows. Plant 2 1-2 to 3 foot rows and cultivate two or three times. Use 200 to 400 pounds of high grade fertilizer to grow them fast.

Sudan Grass, Millet. Of the non-legumes, Sudan grass and German millet are the two most valuable and quickest-growing summer crops, being ready to mow within sixty days after planting.

Sudan grass may be seeded up to August 15 and make good yields. Sudan grass will make two to three cuttings planted on fertile soils and makes a yield of fine-tempered leafy nutritious hay which cures easily.

The crop may be seeded in rows 24 to 30 inches apart or be sown broadcast. In rows, it requires from six to eight pounds of seed an acre and broadcast, 25 to 35 pounds. When more than one cutting is expected, the crop should be mown as soon as the seed heads begin to show. When it is planted to make only one cutting, allow the seed to reach the early dough stage before cutting.

Millet. German millet, sometimes called golden millet, is the best variety for mid and late summer seeding as it will give better results, during the hot summer seasons than the other varieties.

This crop should be seeded broadcast and at the rate of twenty-five to forty pounds of seed an acre. Thicker seeding produces fine stemmed hay of good variety. Only one mowing may be expected, though the yield is not unusual one to two tons per acre and the crop will be ready to cut in 55 or 60 days after seeding.

Sudan grass and millet should be planted on as fertile soil as possible and four to six hundred pounds of an high grade fertilizer used. As soon as the plant comes up and starts to grow apply 100 to 200 pounds of quick-acting form of nitrogen. These two crops are much heavier feeders from the soil than soybeans and do not improve the soil.

SALES OF NEW AUTOMOBILES MUCH BELOW LAST YEAR. Sales of new automobiles continue to stay considerably below those of a year ago, so that for the first six months of this year, from January 1 to July 1, 17,827 fewer new cars and trucks had been sold in North Carolina than during the same six months period in 1929, according to figures by Sprague Silver, chief of the automobile license bureau.

During the first six months of 1929, a total of 39,452 new cars and trucks were sold, while in the six month period ending June 30, 1930, only 21,625 new cars and trucks had been sold, making a difference of 17,827.

Mystery Story Solution. The pretty young kindergarten mistress had been telling her pupils all about the winds, their power, different effects, and so on. "And, children," she went on enthusiastically, "as I came to school this morning on top of the bus, something softly came and kissed my cheek. What do you think it was?" "The conductor!" cried the children joyously.

Debt Of Honor. "Say, doctor," said the brawny scrubwoman, "yer gettin' a perty good thing out of tendin' that rich Smith boy, ain't yer?" "Well," said the doctor amused, "I get a perty good fee, yes. Why?" "Well, Doc, I opes yer won't forget that my Willie threw the brock that 'im."

Speaking Of Angels. "It is extraordinary that Mrs. Jeuks can never see any faults in her children," observed Mrs. Smith. "Mothers never can," remarked her husband. "What an absurd idea, James! So like a man. I'm sure I should see faults in our children at once—if they had any."

WEATHER CHANGE REMINDS OF BIG 1916 JULY FLOOD

Piedmont Section Two States Ravaged By High Water 14 Years Ago

Charlotte News

Sudden change in weather? — As yet local citizens still wear a welcoming grin for the enveloping coolness. They remember their growling about torrid waves and sleepless nights of a few days ago.

Some even call to mind that sudden change in weather of fourteen years ago exactly, which wiped out lives, washed out thousands of dollars worth of live stock, gutted highways, left gorges where magnificent scenic paved highways had existed, left rails and ties of the Southern system in the mountains of Western North Carolina hanging high in the air, and in short brought a flood of unparalleled damage and unspeakable horror to the land.

For in the minds of F. C. Abbott and other explorers of the waste country left by that three day flood of 1916 most graphic disaster picture is not that of the sinking of the Titanic. It is the Titanic sinking in North Carolina of lives and property in that great flood.

It came with awful suddenness. Beginning as small disturbances about the Caribbean Sea, the Summer West Indian hurricane swept up from Florida to Charleston, S. C., curved inward and North, left the districts around Asheville desolate, swept away bridges and cotton mills around Charlotte and made Elkin and that territory rivers of desolation.

The rain continued July 14, 15 and 16 and became a major catastrophe which wiped out speculation of North Carolinians about that stalking beast of war in Europe which was loosed two years previously and even then was creeping towards America.

Landslides about Marion, washouts in the Biltmore village, water savages about Bat Cave and Chimney Rock, destruction and death spread from the Yadkin River, Wilkes County incredibly damaged, breaking of Lake Toxaway,—these are the few big names which recall all the horrors of the period.

Seaboard and P. and N. bridges were washed out near Mount Holly. Nothing but abutments were left of the Southern Railway bridge on the Gaston County side and mighty little on the Mecklenburg side, the highway bridge at Belmont which had been built at a cost of $100,000 only two years previously was demolished. The Southern Railway bridge over the Catawba River near Rock Hill, S. C., which was the last to go out, meant breaking of the main line of travel from Charlotte to Jacksonville. Cotton mills, Monbo especially, on the Catawba River near Statesville were crumbled and washed away.

But this is to record what Mr. Abbott could describe in particular. And it is shivery enough without bringing that up.

Getting His Hide. Squire Perkins—"Well, after I die, I wish you would marry Deacon Brown."

Nell—"Why so, Hiram?" Squire—"Well, the deacon trimmed me on a horse trade once."

Lively Lid. A near-sighted man lost his hat in a strong wind. He gave chase. A woman screamed from a near-by farmhouse:

"What are you doing there?" "Getting my hat," he replied. "Your hat," exclaimed the woman. "That's our little black hen you're chasing."
