Says Jonas Not To Benefit By Effort To Stir Up Battle

Move To Renew Smith Fight Between Democrats To Not G. O. P. Nothing.

Raleigh News and Observer.
When all the extravagant rumors that have gained currency from some mysterious source within the past few days are sifted, one gathers with a degree of conviction not often possible in the case of political rumors that the person most interested in promoting a renewal of conflict within the Democratic party over the Smith anti-Smith issue is our old friend Congressman Charley Jonas. More, we may be sure there will be no tearing open of wounds already healed unless Mr. Jonas succeeds in his purpose. That purpose, first is to split the Democrats of the ninth district so that Mr. Jonas may be elected in November to succeed himself and second to contribute incidentally any advantage to be gained thereby to the Republican party generally in North Carolina.

Whether Mr. Jonas is the blunderer he appeared to be in the last Republican convention when he smeared the Parker nomination for the United States supreme court with cheap politics, or whether he is the shrewd politician some of his friends have declared him to be, he at least is clever enough to know that only by some internal strife among the ninth district job. That's the way he acquired it. What more simple than that he should seek to hold it the same way?

But 1928 is not 1926; there is a difference. In the ninth district it manifested itself in two vigorous primary contests for the Democratic congressional nomination. When the ballots were counted and the result declared, the defeated candidate Hamilton C. Jones, hastened to Maj. A. L. Bulwinkle with the pledge of full support. Moreover, nothing was said or done in either campaign to prevent any Democrat from wholeheartedly supporting the party nominee.

The difference between 1928 and 1930 manifested itself among Democrats in the state generally in a state-wide senatorial contest the result of which so clearly demonstrated the will of the majority that no Democrat can afford to go into November's campaign with reservations much less with hostility to the party's nominee.

So now no Democrat finding it desirable to foment trouble within the party, Mr. Jonas undertakes the role, with talk of letters and petitions, campaigns and conspiracies.

Unless every sign falls, it will net him exactly nothing.

Paid In Full.
Fayetteville Observer.

Friends of Senator Simmons believe that the senator will accept an appointment in Washington when his term expires, if one is tendered him by President Hoover, despite his announced intention to return to his farm in Jones county and rest.

They point out that Senator Simmons has been accustomed to live in Washington for the past 30 years, that he is an old man and would be adverse to changing his residence or habits of life, and that Mrs. Simmons would prefer to remain in Washington.

Consequently, if Senator Simmons is tendered an appointment on March 4, he will probably accept it. There are a number of federal commissions upon which the minority party must be represented, and which are jobs in keeping with the dignity of an ex-senator.

Although Senator Simmons has vigorously fought the Republicans on the floor of the senate, he has always maintained the friendliest personal relationships with the Republican leaders, and President Hoover should feel grateful to the senator for North Carolina's electoral votes in 1928. Consequently it is a logical candidate for one of the honorary posts which must go to a Democrat.

BELWOOD SCOUTS ON CAPITAL TOUR

Scout Boys Under Scout Master Alvin Probst See Nation's Capital

(Special To The Star)
Belwood, Aug. 6.—Twenty boy scouts of Belwood troop No. 1 spent last week in Washington, D. C. The trip was made by motor going by the way of Richmond, Va., and returning by the way of the Shenandoah Valley.

The troop owns necessary camping equipment, which was carried along, and camp was set up at the Washington Tourist's Camp.

Just before we reached Washington we visited historic Mt. Vernon, our first president's home. While in Washington we visited most of the government buildings including all museums, navy yard, art galleries, war and navy departments, bureau of engraving and printing, capitol, library of Congress, White House, Pan American, American Revolution, American Red Cross, and Lincoln Memorial. We also went up in Washington's monument for a view of the city.

Wednesday afternoon we were guests of the Washington American League baseball club as they played Philadelphia. "Lefty" Grove, the American league's leading pitcher pitched for Philadelphia.

Next we visited Arlington Cemetery where soldiers of the different wars have been laid to rest. While here we visited the tomb of the unknown soldier which is guarded both day and night.

From Arlington we went to the Shenandoah, and endless caverns of Virginia where we spent some three hours viewing the beautiful underground formations of these caverns.

Those making the trip were: J. Alvin Probst, scoutmaster; Luther Houser, assistant scoutmaster, and scouts John Warlick, Jr., Debro Peeler, Thomas Peeler, R. F. Tillman, Fred Probst, Wellington Martin, Monroe Dixon, Lee Willis, Muriel Dellinger, Roy Carpenter, Wayne Carpenter, Robert Porter, Edward White, James White, J. D. Hicks, Dwight Boggs, Sam Sain, and Eugene Hubbard.

This trip will long be remembered by the boy scouts of Belwood.

TREE PERCHER FALLS, INJURED

Kentucky Boy, With 496 Hours To Good, May Die From Plunge Of 48 Feet.

Ashtand, Ky., Aug. 6.—A fall that may cost him his life ended McIntosh's tree sitting here today after he had been up 496 hours.

The lad who is 16 years old, slipped as he leaned forward to pull up his lunch and tumbled 45 feet to the ground. It was feared that his neck was broken.

Gaston Is Successor To Wray At Gastonia

Armstrong Mill Man Becomes Executive Secretary of Gastonia Body.

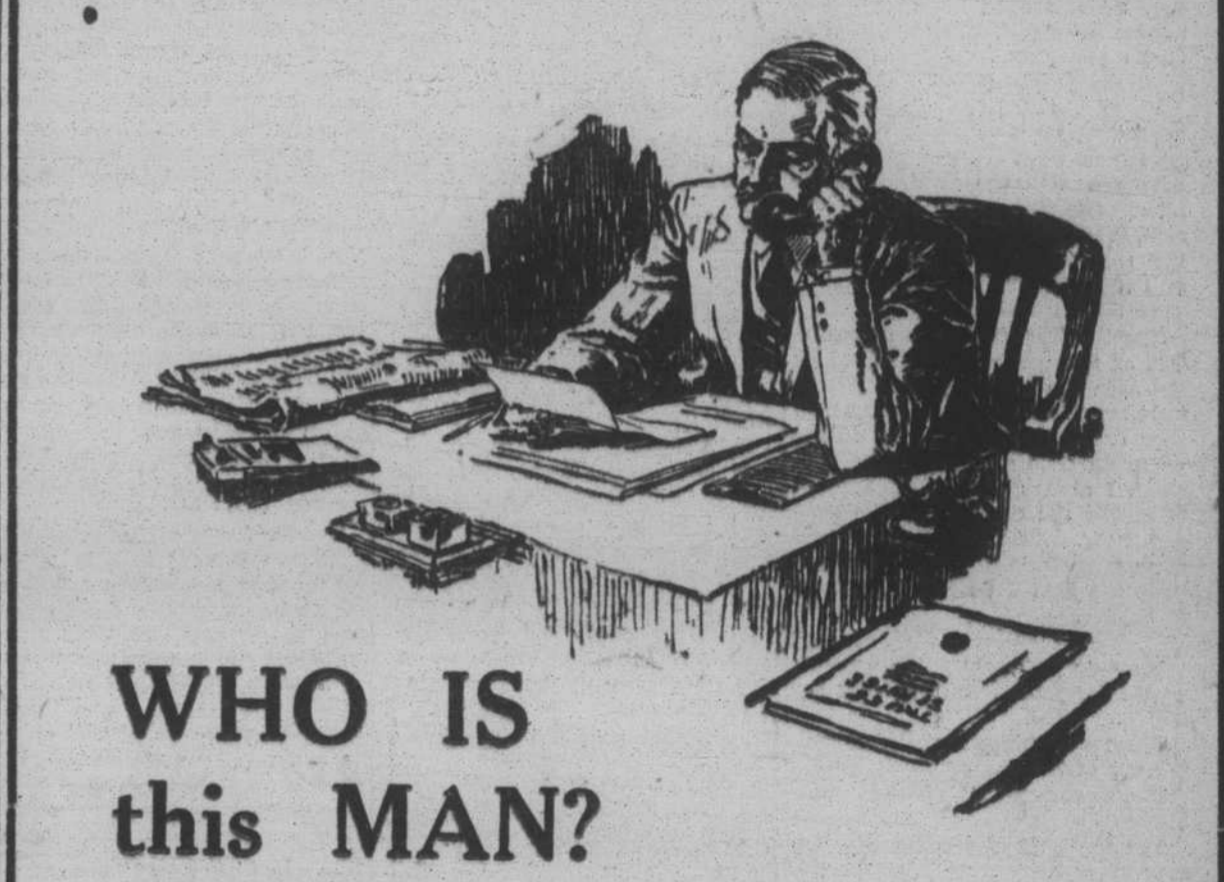

Gastonia.—W. Grady Gaston, for the last several years with the Armstrong chain of mills, one of the largest textile combines in Gaston county, was elected to and accepted the position as executive secretary of the Gastonia chamber of commerce, according to announcement made by the chamber's board of directors.

Mr. Gaston succeeds Joe E. Wray,

Cal's Windmill

Plymouth, Vt.—Back to his farm house homestead for a brief visit, Calvin Coolidge has been provided with a diversion. A miniature windmill he built in the days before he became President and which he used to like to watch spin has been unearthed from the cellar by Mrs. Coolidge and once again the former President sits on the piazza admiring his handiwork.
