At The Theaters

Today at the Webb: Bargain day with Dorothy MacKail and Sidney Blackmer in "Strictly Modern." Film gossip has it that Dorothy is in her funniest picture this time... demonstrating 1940 methods of winning the man she wants. Thursday and Friday—Lupe Velez makes love beat law in "Tiger Rose." Saturday—"Caught Short" with Marie Dressler, Polly Moran and Anita Page.

Today at the Carolina theatre: "A Song of Kentucky" and comedy and travelogue, ten-cent day. Tomorrow and Friday—Richard Dix in "Lovin' the Ladies." Dick wallops his way through another one of those laugh gags. He's handsome and happy... and popular too. Saturday—"Wings of Adventure," all talking western thriller.

Boyce Biggers, who recently made a trip across the drought stricken area of Virginia, states that he was much impressed by the appearance of the Kudzu vines which were used at many dwellings as shades for porches.

"While most of the vegetation was brown and dead," said Mr. Biggers, "the Kudzu vines were green and apparently not affected by the dry weather."

In showing my garden which is waist deep in Kudzu, during the dry season, several persons have accused me of watering it because the soil under the dense foliage is so damp even during a drought.

July heat beat all records throughout the country. Paris alters evening silhouettes with long and slinky gowns.
