Fish Story No. 888,999,999.
Had a note from a friend who went to Myrtle Beach on a fishing trip and he sent me a picture of himself and the big fish he caught one day last week. I noticed that he used the same (stuffed) fish I used last summer when I had my picture and the fish's picture taken to lie about. Another sucker exposed.

The farm board seems to be making progress. Chairman Legge told a Wichita, Kansas, man to go to hell the other day, but I don't think he went. It is possible that he will halfway carry out the request by going to Chicago. The farm board is one of the wealthiest boards in the world at present, so say Erad and Dunstreet. It owns 69,000,000 bushels of wheat, 1,200,000 bales of cotton and just outlinings of pines and eggs and milk and oats and fish potatoes and mebbe some huckleberries.

Wrong Pig By The Ear.
We are prone to complain about women and children driving automobiles, but did you know that about 98 percent of our highway wrecks are due to reckless driving by big, grown-up, sensible (?) speedy men? Of course, many of these so-called men have nursed a few whiffs from a fruit jar and their brains become a whirligig. But women and children look like they are going to run over you or into you, but I have decided that they at least think while they drive.

Model Political Speech.
Gentlemen, Ladies and Fellow citizens: I am the poor man's friend. I was born betwixt the plow handles. I know your needs. I am a self-made man. (Voice from audience: A bum job, I call it!). I am in favor of turning off everybody. I am against spending money. (Voice from crowd: That's right—you trade on credit and never pay!). I voted against the dog tax and the snuff tax and the boll weevil. (Voice from the crowd: "How many drinks did you get for voting for those bonds?"). Send me back to the house—(Voice from the crowd: "We will, but it will be your own house"). I will work for the farmer and the labor. I will appreciate your sufferings at the poles next election day. (Audience: "Shut up and sit down!").

NEXT
While awaiting my turn in barber shop the other day, I observed many interesting things. First, I found out that I am a poor wailer. Next, I read this sign hanging on an overhead heating pipe that swung rather low near the shoe-shine stand: "Notice—Don't bump your head; This means YOU." I didn't get bumped.

I found out this while in that barber shop: Were it not for a few dandies and cake eaters and lounge lizards, and possibly a few particular people, the barbers would starve to death. They simply could not get along on patronage like unto mine: Vizzily—a 35 cent hair-cut about every 3 weeks. When my curls on my neck get long enough to invite the use of hair-pins, I have them severed forth with.

I watched a young fellow get dolled up in that barber shop. He was a mechanic in a garage. He drew possibly $17.50 per week. He was handsome and had found out out from somebody. He was in love. I saw that the first glance. He stayed in the barber's chair 1 hour and 43 minutes by my watch. When he got through, the man poked the following bill at him:

Hair Cut	$0.35
Shave	15
Shampoo	50
Head Wash	25
Neck Shave	10
Nose Blown	15
Eyebrows Trimmed	10
Eyelashes Groomed	15
Pimples Squeeze	10
Hair Singed	25
Bone Massaged	35
Lips Painted	25
Face Steamer	15
Ears Washed	10
Shoes Shined	10
Tip	10

$4.45

N. B. The barber added the bill up himself and took a check for it, therefore—I am not yet able to tell you just exactly how much he lost.

MIKE HAS A VISITOR
dear mr. editor:
...a spirit come to the last night and now I believe in same. I don't know whether it was mr. connan doll's spirit or not, but it walked up to the head of my bed and shuck it and sed—mike; is that you, and I sed yes, is that you, and it sed what you doing here and I sed I am trying to sleep, what do you want?

the spirit then moved over to the other bed post and shuck it and sed are you there still, and I sed I am here but I ain't still, and he took his left arm off and flew away, ritte or foam if you ever saw a spirit.

MIKE IS PESSY MISTICK
flat foot, s. c. aug. 22, 1930.
dear mr. editor:
...a man asked me the other day what was the matter with the times and I told him nothing, and he sed the dickens there aint, and I sed sure, and he sed why, and I sed it's the folks and no, the times that is playing thunder, and he sed you're a liar (and that's why my arm is in a sling ...) and he got up and sed it was boover.
now he got my dander up and I set in to put him right, so I sed the people is all out of jint, the world is on its way back to sensible things, and the guy that thinks his customers is going to keep on paying him 2 prices for his stuff might as well ritte or foam the referree in bank ruptcy to come and get him."

pitcher shows is still charging war prices—they might as well adjust so's somebody will set in them vacant seats, shoe shines will be a nickel before fall, shaves and shines will be back to normal by october, wages is now asinmering down, room rent and board will trickle southward and I suppose my be will sed mebbe c5 a pound off, with a hunk of the cat flung in.

credick aint as easy as it useter be except for things the folks aint going to be able to buy, poor folks will learn to walk again and rich folks will not find as many suckers as heretofore, hospitals and taxes and public offis holders will be the last to realize that normacy is a slow fighter, but wins in the long run.

as for me and my house, I will say that I can do on less if I hafter, mebbe cotton goods will look o. k. on the younguns after a while and as for lip sticks, pokeberries will beat them all hollow, chalk is good, enuff to powder the nose and madame zikkisky wont be able to get 4$ for a box of lilywhite that the c10 stoars is now selling for a quarter.

Job hunters wont be choicy next year, but I feel bad already for plumbers and plasterers and doctors: It is going to hurt as the old lady sed when she hit her husband in the hed with the skillet, and shoted: "that stove wood is got to be cut." in 6 months you can tell a feller that his work aint satisfactory and he wont quit, but if you think I am wrong why ritte or foam me at once and I will correct the above.

Retire Bugler Boy After Thirty Years

Fort Benning, Ga.—The bugler boy who was first over the walls of Peking during the Boxer rebellion in 1900 was retired almost 30 years to a day from the date of the historic exploit that brought him the congressional medal of honor and an appointment to the West Point Military academy.

Lieutenant Colonel Calvin P. Titus, an instructor in the infantry school at Fort Benning, was on the way to Los Angeles, where he will engage in Bible study and teaching. Titus was a young enlisted man when the Americans stormed the walled city of Peking, August 14, 1900. The boxers opened a galling fire on the attackers, who rushed to temporary shelter near the foot of the wall. Titus' colonel believed that if the wall could be climbed the Americans might surprise the Boxers and gain entrance to the city. Titus volunteered.

He climbed the 30 foot wall, pulled a rifle after him and opened fire on the enemy, surprising them. Other Americans followed and built up a firing line, which gradually overcame Boxer resistance and led to the capture of the city. During the fighting Titus received a slight wound.

Congress voted him a cadetship at West Point, and President Roosevelt went to the military academy and personally pinned the medal of honor on Titus' blouse.

Chicken Wagon On Wheels Money Maker

Farmers Discuss Method of Making Money on Chicks, Old Compost Heaps

(By J. A. Wilson)
Bass Suttle says build your chicken house on wheels, get 100 dubs ready to feather, then hitch team to this house every morning and move to the fields. Let fowls range over plowed land and stubble, gathering all the insects and wasted grain, and he guarantees you will have fat healthy chicks, and never lose a single one unless the hawks get them. In the evening sweep out the droppings on the land, and plow until every chick goes to roost, then hitch up and drive home. You see he means for you to put in a full day, as well as save chick feed, which is all very well if you wish to do it that way. He says to tell you he is applying for a patent on this and you might phone or write him. The writer has tried this part of the way and feels sure it will work out well.

Old Compost Heap
Our sympathies go out to any fairly trying to make ends meet on poor land. Brains count more than work here and a few ideas might help. Years ago the compost heap was very important. We had one always arranged near the wash place where the home laundry was done, so the "soap suds" could go on it. The sweepings from the yards, chicken roosts and smoke house with its salt all went into this pen, with plenty of lime, ashes and rich earth. We did not know then that the lime and ashes sent our ammonia off into the air, in fact we did not know there was such a thing as ammonia then, but the rich earth held enough of it to make it very effective when placed under the growing crop. All old bones, weeds and waste material went into this and kept the premises clean around our home. Some of this was used on gardens, and the remainder went under several acres of cotton in the orchard. I remember that cotton now how it grew and opened so pretty and white, no dead leaves and the apples, peas, peaches, plums and grapes how large and delicious they were with never a sign of blight. Then the "sea fowl guano" came from South America and made it easy to get the commercial fertilizer, so the old time compost has lost its place.

I have been amused of late years to see some of my tenants come to my chicken roost to get fertilizer for their gardens, when they had more chickens than I, but let their droppings go to waste. If we ever get back to normalcy again it is going to take some of the old time ways with a lot of home-made stuff to do it. And I hope every one who has not got a pretty sure job will get back to the land, dig in, where they can have free air, water, wood and sunshine, and make the best of it possible. This will be better than standing in the soup or bread line later.

Petting And Kissing Are Costly For Italian Pair

Florence, Italy, Aug. 16.—Kissing and petting—under some circumstances—have become expensive in the city made famous by the romance of Dante and Beatrice.

A city judge with an austerity reminiscent of Savonarola sentenced Bruno Irminti to three months and 10 days in jail for kissing his fiancée, Letizia Mammi, in a public park, and the latter three months for accepting the caresses.

Both sentences were suspended later. The penalty in Rome for a similar offense is a mere dollar fine.

Hoey Calls Republicans

(Charlotte News.)

The Democrats of the state are determined to let the people of North Carolina know that they are on the battle-lines and with weapons in hands to wage militant warfare this fall with the Republicans over the immediate issues that are to the fore, notably of course, that of prohibition.

From the tone of Clyde Hoey's speech in Randolph county the other day, he is one campaigner for the Democrats who does not propose to let the Republicans get away with the claim that they compose the dry party of North Carolina and of the United States.

"The Democratic party" shouts the Shelby oracle, "brought prohibition to this state and passed every law upon our statute books looking to its enforcement. Now the state is enforcing the prohibition laws with energy and zeal and there are at least twenty-five prosecutions by state officials to every one by federal officers. The Republican party came out for prohibition in North Carolina two years ago. They were suddenly converted and they are still professing faith. In the nation they have shown no special zeal for prohibition, and we see the Republicans of New Jersey nominate Dwight Morrow for the senate upon a ringing wet platform of absolute repeal of the 18th amendment and we hear President Hoover announce that he will use all the power of the White House to elect this wet Mr. Morrow. That's how dry the Republicans are. They never let prohibition interfere with politics unless they can fool some Democrat by professing prohibition. The Democrats gave North Carolina prohibition and they are going to maintain and enforce it, but there never will be a nation enforcement of prohibition while the Republican party is in power. It will continue to make it a football of politics."
