

"Down Hill Business" Farming

The First National bank, of Oneonta, Alabama, recently ran the following display advertisement in its local paper, the Southern Democrat: "As long as farmers live out of tin cans and paper sacks and feed their mules out of tow-sacks, farming will be a down-hill business."

Farmers, bankers and business men are in best shape in those communities where farms are made to produce, first of all, food.

The farm program adopted by farmers and bankers of Colquitt county, Georgia, requires that each one-horse farm of 30 acres contain two or three milk cows, two brood sows and 50 pure-bred hens, in addition to careful diversification of crops. Figures recently released by the chamber of commerce show that the 1929 value of crops in the county was $7,640,700, as compared with the 1927 figure of $4,413,118, soon after the program was adopted.

On his 400-acre farm, H. P. Tigrett, of Dyer county, Tenn., raises everything necessary for the upkeep of his family of six and the families of his five tenants. His hogs bring him $1,200 a year after providing all the pork needed on his farm. Sales of surplus corn and hay bring him in an average of $100 a year. He specializes on sheep and his 258 Hampshire constitute the largest registered flock in Tennessee. An annual income of $2000 is realized from the sale of registered rams and wool.

During the past twelve months, Wilkes county, N. C., farmers sold 1,800,000 pounds of poultry for which they received $380,000. 200,000 dozen eggs were sold, bringing $56,000. The total value of poultry and eggs sold during the twelve-month period was $436,000. Last year saw $253,000 worth of hogs and cattle shipped from the eastern part of Clay county, Ark. Poultry and eggs brought $135,000 and cream sales amounted to $97,500. The total income from the cow, sow and hen was very nearly half a million dollars.

A regular contributor to the Elba (Ala.) Clipper has had a standing offer in Coffee county of a $1,000 reward to anyone who will show him a cow-hog-hen farmer who has made a failure. The reward has never been claimed. He might extend his offer to the adjoining county of Covington with no greater risk of having the reward claimed. Co-operative sales of poultry and hogs in Covington county from November 1, 1929, to April 30, 1930, amounted to $70,597.90.

His poultry flock, dairy herd, and hogs pay J. A. Nicholson, of Alamance county, N. C., a good profit for practically everything he grows on his 150-acre farm. Mr. Nicholson's flock averages about 2,000 white leghorns hens that lay about 800 eggs a day throughout the year. He sells a few baby chicks, but depends largely on the sale of "eating" eggs for his income. His poultry is handled as a farm flock only, practical and not fancy, but it brings him a good income and these are an unmistakable air of contentment and well-being about his farm.

Louisiana produced poultry and eggs last year valued at $7,784,000, but it is estimated that the state consumes poultry products every year worth $20,000,000. The city of New Orleans alone buys over $6,000,000 worth of poultry products every year. Louisiana farmers can treble their production without exceeding the consuming capacity of the state.

B. Austell, of Cleveland county, N. C., has a farm flock that averaged 1,141 hens during the past six months and paid him a labor income, above feed costs, of $2,501 for the six-month period. Mrs. A. M. Smith, of Wake county, N. C., says if it hadn't been for their poultry last fall she doesn't know what would have become of them. Her net profit of $2,679 from an average flock of 650 hens saved the day for them.

The Georgia Bankers' association has recently adopted a definitely constructive policy with reference to farm credit. With no thought of dictating to the farmer how he must run his farm, the bankers have gone on record to the effect that they do not consider it a safe practice to extend credit to farmers who are not producing their own food and feed, with cotton and other cash crops as clear surpluses. Much credit for the adoption of this policy is due John Mr. Graham, the new president of the association, whose bank in Rome is an outstanding example of what constructive banking can do to help the farmers of the community attain sound farm prosperity.

In order to carry out the adopted policy the association will create an agricultural board in each county. This board will be the body through which the bankers will maintain their agricultural contacts and the agency working together with other organized agricultural interests, that will formulate definite county agricultural programs.

Finds Americans Profane, But With Sense Of Humor

2 col 24—Find AMERICANS inside Cleveland, O.—Dr. Tomio Motose, Ph.D., of Tokyo, has definitely determined that the American people are a profane lot, but he's happy to say that they have a better sense of humor than the people of England.

Dr. Motose is a student of Dr. Masao, of Chiosen, and Or Tanaka of Tokyo, both of whom, in Dr. Motose's opinion, are quite good. The two doctors have agreed in their writings that the Americans are profane.

"But profanity in this country is not vulgar," said Dr. Motose. "It is an art. Not a fine art, perhaps, but a most convenient art. Swearing seems to serve as a safety valve for emotional stress in this country. It makes a large vocabulary unnecessary and it prevents argument."

Dr. Motose, Ph.D., became so interested in the writings of Dr. Masao and Dr. Tanaka that he elected to conduct a personal test.

He decided that he would pick out a typical American city, walk about the streets of that city, and, in a good-natured way, stop pedestrians and advise them to walk straight with an erect posture. The way he handled it was thus:

"I beg your pardon, sir, but would suggest that you walk a bit straighter and throw your shoulders back." He took his notebook along to record the reactions.

Today he announced the results of his test, as follows:

318 swore.

156 looked puzzled and said nothing.

220 just smiled and walked on.

25 made gestures indicating they did not consider Dr. Motose should be permitted to go about alone.

23 sputtered incoherently and indignantly.

47 thanked him sarcastically.

10 thanked him sincerely.

87 argued that they were walking correctly.

9 said they couldn't help walking that way, that they were getting old.

The rest paid no attention, as if they considered Dr. Motose to be a panhandler.

Of the 318 who swore, 33 were eloquent. Fifty told him to mind his s-b-and-so business. Two expounded upon his possible future. One hundred and eighty swore, as it were with a smile.

Motose said, "Americans have a better sense of humor than the English. I tried a similar experiment in London. I was, what you call, tossed on my ear."

Dr. Motose studied at Oxford, taught psychology in Tokyo University and has been an interpreter for the league of nations.

Favors Cotton Dusting.

According to P. L. Bryan of Garner, route 2, in Wake county the farmer who says that cotton dusting is no good is usually too lazy to do the necessary work. Mr. Bryan has 18 acres that are conceded to be the best in his community and all of the crop has been dusted.

The red-haired "tiger woman," Mrs. Frances Kirkwood Van Clief, of Queens, N. Y., who two years ago was acquitted of manslaughter after stabbing her husband, Dr. Kirkwood, to death, is dead, as also is her husband. Police believe Van Clief killed her and then committed suicide.

Every time smokers light up they help pay the expense of the government.

What the American people seem to want is more prosperity and more holidays.

Going to church next Sunday would be a good idea.

Thin, Pale, Weak

"I HAD been through a bad spell of sickness which left me very weak," says Mrs. Virginia Spruce, of Stapleton, Va. "I was pale and felt lifeless, and my strength did not return. I spent most of my time on the bed. I was very nervous, and the least thing upset me. I did not have strength enough to lift a broom. At times I would have had headaches, which would hurt me until I could hardly see. "Someone asked me why I did not try Cardui. I had read of it, so I thought I would see what it would do for me. It was really remarkable how I came out. My strength returned, and my health was better than it had been in years. I gained in weight about ten pounds. My color was good, and I ceased to suffer from headaches. I have told my friends about Cardui because I was benefited after taking it."
