There is a real reason back of all this. The question of underweight centers about a good many contributing factors. Ferhaps the first thing to consider is whether the child has any physical defects. It is well to have your doctor look him over and give his opinion on the subject.

Sometimes a child with defective eyesight or poor hearing will develop a serious physical condition. Very often a nervous, high-strung child who is behind in his school work will be found to have quite serious eyestrain. If allowed to go on, mainurition and underweight might follow.

In the case of adenoids or diseased tonsils, poisons are carried by the blood stream to all parts of the body. Such a condition hould be attended to at the earliest possible moment. If the child seems to be underweight from this sert of thing.

Major Campbell believes if he had been willing to "accept orders from Washington and to accommodate local politicians at the expense of honest enforcement," he might have his Federal job today, but he couldn't stand the hypocrisy. He says:

"So intolerable did my situation become during the summer of the 1928 presidential campaign that I write my resignation, because I fel I could no longer remain in the ser vice under oath and obeys the orders issued to me from Washington Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, who had brought about my entrance into the service, persuaded me to remain because of the damage my resignation would cause to Republican chance: in New York. I saved my conscience by refusing to obey orders from Seymour Lowman.

During that summer I told all the facts to Ogden Mills, under secretary of the treasury. I told them to Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt. I told them to Gen. Andrews and know that he told them to Col. William J. Donovan, then confidential campaign advisor to Herbert Hoover. It would surprise me to know that Mr. Hoover was not made aware of them at that time. Yet under the Hoover administration Mr. Lowman remained in the treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement. These are some facts as Major Campbell lists them in his charges against the Republican party which posed as so virtuous and so clear of breath in the 1928 campaign.

Talking about the many methods used to violate the law Major Campbell said:

"In Newark, cents: of New Jecsey's political hotbed, a former administrator, Col. A. J. Hanlon, tried during his term of office to cut down alcohol withdrawals, too. He was sent to Porto Rico. Col. Hanlon's transfer occurred after he refused to issue a permit to the National Grain Yeast company, the attorney for which was David E. K. Bruce, son-in-law of Secretary Mellon. After Hanlon left for Porto Rico the permit was issued."
