Awake Half the Night Weak and in Pain

"Night after night I could not sleep," writes Mrs. Mary J. Roberts, 117 West Franklin St., Raleigh, N. C. "I would lie awake half the night. I was dizzy and weak, suffered frequently with pains in my side and small part of my back."

"When I was a girl, my mother gave me Cardui, and it did me so much good, I thought I would try it again. I took five bottles, and I feel like a new person."

"I think it is fine. I would advise every woman who is weak to try Cardui, for it has certainly put me on my feet."

For Over 50 Years Women Have Taken CARDUI with great benefit.

they are, nothing extenuate nor aught in malice." It is now claimed by the economic prophets that the dog that has been running so long into the woods is now running out of the woods, poetically that "Night's candles are burned out and found day standing tip toe on the mountain tops," scientifically that the law of action and reaction applies to the industrial world and the last year being the worst in history, the next will introduce us to that long departed friend prosperity.

At the same time it is remembered that the dog while running out is still in the woods; that, while the rosy dawn graces the mountain top, it is still dark down in the valley; and that while the cycle of good times is coming our way it will not strike Shelby until she is ready to receive it.

In the meantime there are in Shelby several hundred people out of employment, a people willing to work and anxious to work, the greater part of whom will suffer in silence all the pangs of outrageous fortune and never hint to their most intimate friends that their little ones are going hungry.

This is a class of people we all love, a people who do not want handouts, but a people who ask only for an opportunity to work and thereby make an honest living. What are we going to do about their distress?

Many of our well to do people have doubtless planned many expenditures for next spring, houses to be built, houses to be repaired, houses to be repainted. Doubtless the town has many improvements scheduled for installation just as soon as the panic is over. The county has some roads to be constructed just as soon as practicable and several of our cotton mills would like to make improvements.

But what about the finances? Financiers tell us that there is nothing worth a dollar except a dollar. It is true that dollars are very valuable. With the exception of very few lines a dollar will buy far more today than a year ago. And if the prognosticators are correct, it will buy far more today than a year hence. Therefore those who expect to get above par for their dollars must spend them now.

The weather prophets tell us that we shall have a severe winter and therefore much suffering. Yet there enough of good people in Shelby to transform a bitter winter into glorious summer by a spirit of helpful co-operation. What are we going to do about it?

J. R. DOVER, Shelby, N. C.

1,000,000 Piece Bed.

Pork Falls, Wis.—In Andrew Halaksen's bedroom, behind his filling station here, stands a million-piece bedroom suite—at least 1,000,000 pieces.

The bed, the dresser, a cedar chest and a stand each contain so many tiny bits of walnut, redwood and spruce, cut to pattern and fitted together, that the task of counting them appals even the man who made the furniture.

Mr. Halaksen spent four winters putting together the little bits of wood, carrying out the same design in all four pieces of furniture. It is hard for any one inspecting the work to believe that this man never did any marquetry before—in fact, was not even a woodworker. The inlay appears flawless and nowhere is there a mistake in design.

The exact number of pieces in the furniture is not known. Mr. Halaksen said that he counted 10,000 pieces and could hold all of them in his two hands. Then he stopped counting.

HIDES TITLE TO LEARN NURSING

German Baroness Has Nearly Completed Course At Johns Hopkins.

Baltimore—A German baroness has completed nearly three years as a student nurse at Johns Hopkins hospital, with her title known only to a few intimates.

Baroness Marie Dorothea Eugenia Frein von Kleist is enrolled as Miss Marie von Kleist of Germany. The only hints as to her lineage until recently were those found occasionally on a letter from her father or a package from her mother.

A blonde with curly hair, she told laughingly and with a slight accent of her life and her difficulties in overcoming parental objections to nursing, when her identity became generally known.

"I managed to arrange a trip to the United States in 1926," she explained, "to visit relatives in North Town, a suburb of Buffalo. Afterward I went as far west as Chicago without my parents' permission. My mother was dumfounded when she found out—Chicago has such a bad reputation."

Shortly after this the baroness decided to take up nursing, and planned to enter a New York hospital but her mother overruled this. So she came to Baltimore in the fall of 1927 and enrolled at Johns Hopkins.

"In this country," she said, "nursing is more of a profession than in Europe. I do not know whether I will continue when I graduate. I have never seen my father's new home in Bavaria and am eager to go there for a visit."

Find Nordic Site 5,000 Years Old

Primitive Pottery, Jewelry And Utensils Found In Czechoslovakia.

Philadelphia.—Pottery vessels, bronze earrings, bracelets, arrowheads and iron knives belonging to a period of culture more than 5,000 years old, have been unearthed by the Central European expedition of the University of Pennsylvania museum, this city, and the Peabody Museum, Cambridge, Mass., according to a report just received from Dr. Vladimir J. Dewkes of the University Museum, who is field director of the expedition.

"The second summer's work of the expedition," Dr. Dewkes stated in his report, "has produced a number of interesting and important finds. In the course of our excavation at Horovice, southwest of Prague in Czechoslovakia, we have uncovered objects that point to Slavic burials of the late bronze and iron age."

"In addition to this we have carried on extensive digging at Homolka, northwest of Prague, where the finds reveal a settlement of Prague, where the finds reveal a settlement of people belonging to the so-called Nordic phase of the period, 5,000 years ago.

Eneolithic or earliest bronze age pottery completely dug up it will mark the first time in the history of European archaeology that a primitive settlement has been excavated.

"The Homolka site is a steep, rounded hill connected by a saddle-back to a long ridge and as many as 30 pits have been discovered in the course of a complete excavation of the site. A number of these pits were refuse pits; others were used for purposes which we have not yet been able to determine.

"In addition to the Eneolithic objects types of very primitive pottery have come to light which indicate that the site was possibly occupied over a long period or perhaps that in this region a number of different cultures met and later merged into one.

"Extensive excavations have been carried on at Chrastany, west of Prague, where objects representative of Neolithic and bronze age cultures were found. The material recovered was most important, including some beautiful bronze age pottery and a perforated hoe of the same period.

"The whole Central European region is archaeologically very important, and as yet little understood, and when the finds of the expedition have been studied and the results published, no little light will be thrown on the history of man in Europe.

American Victims in Cuban Sea Tragedy

John T. Wainwright (upper), an American Vice-Consul to Cuba, was drowned in a futile attempt to aid in the rescue of Mrs. William R. Jackson, wife of the American Vice-Consul to Havana, when she fell into the sea in Matanzas Bay. Mrs. Jackson's husband (lower) disappeared in the strong undercurrent in an attempt to reach her with the aid of Wainwright. (International Newsreel)

Just 2 days later, we ordered a bill of goods of the same character from a town 442 miles away, and this shipper decided to ship the said goods to us by truck and in exactly 31 hours (less than 2 days), the stuff was in our warehouse ready for distribution. I believe more strongly in railroads than I do in trucks (which the taxpayers furnish fine road-beds to wear out), but Mr. Railroad must make some changes if he cares to compete. Modern business methods demand quick action and not small-ism.

And furthermore, Bill Smith is the daddy of 4 sons, and each son graduated in the 6th grade at school and there are no more brains in one of the Smith's heads than in any other—but Sam is a railroad engineer, and is paid $275.00 per month for his service. Rubin works in a cotton mill at $36.00 per month, and Joe is a policeman at $150.00 a month, and poor old Tom farms at nothing a month and boards himself and his 7 youngsters. And there you is, Mr. Hoover.

Nobody's Business

GEE MCGEE—

Scrambled Eggs. A cotton goods manufacturer pays the farmer 9 cents for his cotton and manufactures cloth therefrom and sells it back to the farmer on a basis of 9-cent cotton, BUT:

A tobacco manufacturer pays the farmer 12 cents a pound for his tobacco and manufactures therefrom plug tobacco, snuff, cigars and cigarettes, and sells it back to the farmers on a basis of 24-cent tobacco, and WHY? Ask the Republicans.

My firm recently ordered a shipment of merchandise which weighed 2,500 pounds from a distance of 719 miles. It took 1 of our best railroads exactly 14 days to deliver that shipment at destination, thus hauling the said stuff a distance of about 3 miles per hour, and they call that service.

Just 2 days later, we ordered a bill of goods of the same character from a town 442 miles away, and this shipper decided to ship the said goods to us by truck and in exactly 31 hours (less than 2 days), the stuff was in our warehouse ready for distribution. I believe more strongly in railroads than I do in trucks (which the taxpayers furnish fine road-beds to wear out), but Mr. Railroad must make some changes if he cares to compete. Modern business methods demand quick action and not small-ism.

And furthermore, Bill Smith is the daddy of 4 sons, and each son graduated in the 6th grade at school and there are no more brains in one of the Smith's heads than in any other—but Sam is a railroad engineer, and is paid $275.00 per month for his service. Rubin works in a cotton mill at $36.00 per month, and Joe is a policeman at $150.00 a month, and poor old Tom farms at nothing a month and boards himself and his 7 youngsters. And there you is, Mr. Hoover.

I am not selling my opinion at present, in fact—I have never had a bid on any of them, but good times are not just around the corner, as Mr. Ford would have you think. We have to "live down" hard times and good time will return so gradually, we'll never know that they are returning. In 18 months, I think, more of our people will be employed at some kind of wages, cotton will fetch a somewhat better price, wheat will pay for its cost of production, and taxes will be higher and graft slightly more extensive, but we will grow used to our surroundings and will finally quit grumbling. Of course, we could have a war that would help.

And further, I argue a good deal with my wife about ever lution and can almost prove that her cuzzin, sam, who stays with us off and on all of the time, sprung from a baboon on one count of the way he reaches over the table for food before the blessing is hardly asked, but I am against believing that anything was ever anything else back yonder but what it is today, rite or foam how you like the way I dognose this question.

Yours truly,
Mike Clark, rfd.

Not long ago very few long distance calls were handled while the calling subscriber remained at the telephone. Today more than 70 per cent are handled that way.

Today the average time required to complete a long distance call is only 2.4 minutes as compared with 7.5 minutes five years ago.

Similar improvements have been made in your local service and errors now average less than two in every 100 local calls.

These achievements are the result of new inventions, improved operating methods, new equipment, combined with the skill and interest of experienced operators, linemen and engineers cooperating with an army of loyal workers, many of whom are technical experts.

Proud as they are of these accomplishments, the telephone organization is not satisfied. There is no standing still in the Bell System and every day organized effort is directed toward making your service even better tomorrow.
