Another woman stole my husband —do I deserve pity..... or blame?

So...it had happened to her, too. Deserted by her husband, for another woman. She, the ideal wife! She, the woman who had loved and struggled and sacrificed! She, who had scoffed at wives who couldn't hold their husbands' love.

And now... this. Cast aside. An object of pity and scorn. Deserted by the man whom even now, she still loved.

Stephen had been a good husband. Kind, generous, ambitious. What strange madness had suddenly possessed him? How could he have been so cruel to his wife and his two adoring children?

Bitterly she thought of his last scornful words. "I'm through," he had cried. "I hope to heaven I never see you again!" And he had stormed out of the room—leaving her trembling, white-faced, abandoned...

Was it possible that she was to blame? She was still young, beautiful. No wife could have been truer to her husband. "He had no cause—no right—to leave me," she sobbed. But—perhaps she had made the one fatal mistake that has driven countless husbands into other women's arms.

Postmaster Quinn Asks School Aid In Christmas Mail

Children Are Being Instructed As To Postal Methods. Their Aid Is Asked.

(By Postmaster J. H. Quinn, Shelby) Some days ago we mailed to the principal of each school within the territory served by the Shelby post office copies of an important circular recently issued by the post office department entitled "Preparation for Christmas Mailing," as we have done in other years with the earnest hope that all teachers will use it and find it helpful in training the children as to the various features of the postal system. While the teachers, as a rule, are familiar with the various features of the postal system, they are so grouped and classified in said circular that the information can be more easily imparted to others. Some teachers last year about this time used a similar circular to a very great advantage in giving instruction on such points as illegible writing, incorrect and incomplete addresses, bad wrapping and tying parcels, insufficient postage, failure to give return card, marking fragibles and perishables, limit of size and weight of parcels, insuring and registering mail, special delivery and handling of mail, C. O. D. service, rates of postage, importance of mailing early and often, etc. Improvement is noted in communities where special attention was given to these matters. So it is earnestly hoped that all teachers will give us this cooperation this year. Adults, like children, need this instruction and there is no better way to reach the parent than through the child, for "a little child shall lead them."

After they shall have served their purpose otherwise, said circulars should be posted in a conspicuous place about the school where it can be seen at all times. Let's pass the slogan down the line: "Shop now and mail early for early delivery."
