Miss Daisy Crowder left for Dobson Tuesday to visit her sister, Miss Maud Crowder who teaches there. They will both return Friday afternoon for the Christmas holidays.

Getting Even.

"My poor woman," said the minister, meeting one of his congregation dressed in mourning. "I had not heard you had again suffered bereavement."

"Well, I haven't, but my husband annoyed me so this morning that I decided to get back at him by again paying my respects to my first husband."

Vinegar Flend.

Aunt Hetty—"Sakes alive! I don't believe no woman could ever been so fat."

Uncle Hiram—"What y' readin' now, Hetty?"

Aunt Hetty—"Why, this paper tells about an Englishwoman that lost two thousand pounds."

Social Lights Cast Out of Register

The Enigmatical and Invisible Dictators Who Pass Judgment on the 18-Carat Elite of Society Have Sprung More Surprises Between the Leaves of the 1931 Catalogue

By Alice Alden
New York.—Society is slowly recovering from its annual bout of indignation, brought on by the appearance of the Social Register, and rendered acute by a perusal of the social Bible's contents.

This year there are plenty of surprises for the gossips. The most secretive and enigmatical committee responsible for the inclusion or omission of the various names have wielded the blue pencil with a vigor and with a rigorous watch. Some of the best names are out just because they have got themselves separated via the legal route from a blueblood in order to marry someone whose ancestors were not on the passenger list of the Mayflower.

To those humans who have a yen to climb on the social hand wagon of the names of those who have been socially disgraced by the blue book merely for marrying to secure happiness. To the Social Committee it is society that counts, not hearts and human happiness. And if there has been a scandal or two in any ordinary family, there is no committee to sling open the family cupboard and make the skeletons rattle.

Polly Lauder is one of those who has forfeited her place in the social register by her marriage to Gene Tunney. Just a glance at Polly's happy face should be sufficient to assure anybody just how badly she feels about that. Then there's William Willock, Jr., who married one of his mother's servants. The mother of young Willock not only forgave her son but furnished a home for Willie and his Swedish bride. But the Social Register isn't so forgiving, and young Willock is out.

When lovely golden-haired Eleanor Hutton, daughter of the enormously rich social leader, Mrs. E. P. Hutton, eloped with young Preston Sturges, author of "Strictly Dishonorable," she also relinquished her place in the social guide book. But Eleanor isn't worrying much, for she and Sturges are very happy.

It took some time though for some of Eleanor's relatives to crash the register, and now every one is wondering whether the Franklin Huttons' daughter, Barbara, who has just made her debut, will emulate her cousin's example and marry herself out of the book that means so much to some members of society.

Doctor Joseph A. Blake, who was formerly married to the ex-Mrs. Clarence Mackay found his name erased from the register after he had married a nurse. Hope Williams was also ignored, but that was because she went on the stage, and carried her name to a Broadway show. Now she is appearing in one of New York's rowdiest revues, and so she, too, apparently isn't worrying much.

The late George Gould also precipitated a social register scandal. His first wife, Edith, although an actress had been included in the register, but his second wife, Guinevere Sinclair, was never included. Gould married her after the death of his first wife in 1921 and because the affair had been an open scandal the second Mrs. Gould was never recognized by society or the Blue Book. When Gould died, Guinevere wedded Viscount Dunford, but up to now society has failed to receive her and in Europe she moves in a circle somewhat removed from the most exclusive. If any family in New York should be able to give a lecture on the idiosyncrasies of the catty committee on the register, it is the Louis G. Kaufmans, the senior Kaufmans are listed but Louis G., their son, who married Dorothy Dilley, a dancer, is omitted. But here's the catch. Another son, Gray, who married Mae Daw, one of Ziegfeld's glorified, has his place in the book. The question is why did the committee show Louis the door and permit Gray to remain? Perhaps even the committee can answer that one.

Of course there are some cats who persists that enough millions and sufficient fighting spirit can in time enable their possessor to crash the gate. It must be so, or else why should so many of them fight tooth and nail to remain, once they have made the grade?

"In many states a hunting license entitles you to one deer and no more."
"Just like a marriage license."
