College Pupils No Worse Than Average Person

Muchly Criticized Students Are Just Typical of the Modern Person.

Washington.—College students apparently are no better and no worse than the country's population at large.

A study of moral conditions in the 69 land grant universities and colleges, included in a survey of the institutions by the federal office of education, has led to that conclusion.

Considerable space in the recently completed 1,800 page, two-volume report was given to problems of handling fraternities and societies and students' conduct at social affairs, showing that heads of a good many institutions experienced trouble with student drinking and behavior at dances.

Drinking was listed as one of the greatest and chief trouble makers at 25 of the institutions. Six colleges reported trouble from extreme types of dancing. Eleven reported a "great deal of trouble because of attendance at cafes and roadhouses after dances" and some declared "withdrawal from halls to cars and rides after dances, the stag line and attendance at public dances" brought complaints.

"Action of alumni and guests from other colleges and high schools was given fairly frequently as a problem causing concern to college officials," said the report.

"Discourtesy to chaperons seemed to be fairly common complaint. The report on the requirement of chaperons at dances makes a brave showing and probably there is some useful purpose served by having older people at student functions. However, when one remembers the sea with which couples leave the dance hall the handiness of the automobile and its powers of quick transportation and seclusion, one cannot but wonder whether the chaperon is a figurehead."

The survey, begun in 1927 with a congressional appropriation of $117,000, was designed partly to pool information among the institutions. It covers fees charged, courses offered and use made by graduates of their training and also gives considerable space to faculty and athletic questions.

The land grant colleges have an enrollment of 100,000 men and 69,000 women, or 16 per cent of the college population.

With the beginning of a New Year we want to thank our friends and customers for their loyalty and confidence the past year and ask the co-operation of every citizen of Cleveland county in working with us for the financial and economic improvement of Cleveland county during this year. Let us realize that money kept at home, hidden away or sent away from the community hinders prosperity and brings about an unfortunate economic condition. Money placed in banks is kept in circulation and used for business purposes, thereby keeping the wheels of progress moving. We all want prosperity and progress, and such conditions can only be brought about by co-operation and all working together for the financial interest of the whole community.
