Robinson Bill Passes Senate, Blow To Hoover

President Suffers Two Defeats In Senate Voting In One Day.

Washington, Jan. 26.—By one-sided votes, the senate Monday afternoon dealt two defeats to President Hoover over the dole issue.

It voted down, 53 to 30, the Reed move to defer the dole until February 9 to let the Red Cross first raise its $10,000,000 relief fund from the public.

Administration leaders, expecting these setbacks in the senate, will stage another battle in the house, and if they are defeated there, they hope to find some compromise in conference acceptable both to the president and to the senate, so that the interior bill, otherwise doomed, will not fall and thus force an extra session of congress after March 4.

Hope To Avoid Veto. Enough Republicans stood with the president against the Robinson rider to indicate that if Mr. Hoover should veto the interior bill because of the rider, his veto would be sustained.

Morrow Backs Hoover. Senator Dwight Morrow of New Jersey was one of the small band that stood by the White House.

Amid the heated debate, Senator Reed's remark that the country is going to be shocked by the treasury deficit stood out.

It is not that I am trying to save this money for the federal government. God knows we are going to have a deficit when the March income tax returns come in that is going to make us hesitate about spending every cent.

Around Our TOWN Shelby SIDELIGHTS

By RENN DRUM.

Shelby is still far enough down in the small city class that the men who have them seldom ever get to wear their tuxedos except at big church weddings, which are not taking place so frequently times being as they are.

Not so many years ago when a young Shelby man and his girl friend fixed the date everybody in town knew about it by the time the milk wagons started rolling the next morning—and how it was talked.

But as things are now the most beautiful, the wealthiest, or the fastest-stepping young lady in town has to get herself betrothed and near the altar before the whole town begins whispering behind hands, or over the tea cups and wafers on the bridge tables.

When, if ever, such-and-such a young lady will "get off" is no longer prophesied and gossiped about promiscuously except among the older families of the city who still live and think in the circle that existed when Shelby had just 3,000 population and was darned proud of it.

"Speaking of pretty women," speaks up a rather attractive young miss herself, "Shelby's prettiest woman is a young nurse, M. W."

If Flo Ziegfeld in person were to visit town, he would have a difficult job of making a better selection.

Some of these days we may spill a cherished secret and get into worlds of trouble.

Did you know that one of the best male singers in Shelby is fond of chewing gum, and that every time he stands to sing with the choir in church he plants his chewing gum behind his ear, leaves it there while singing, then removes it and starts chewing again?

The old timers about town haven't chipped in with some "remember whens" in ever so long. Got to get them started again: Remember when women wore their watches on their left shoulders and held them in place with a fleur-de-lis pin?

That was somewhere back about the time that a drug store was operated where Tom Eskridge runs a grocery store now, and long before Olin Hamrick moved out of the house where the Montgomery Ward store now stands.

Take a stroll by the T. W. Hamrick store and see the two photos, in the display window, of Shelby's championship team of 26 years ago. Off-hand we recall that the following were among the players pictured: Grover Hamrick, Odus Mull, Nelson Latimore, Forrest Williams and Reid Morrison.

Remember the good old days when fifteen and sixteen year old boys boasted of how many times they had read the Bible through instead of how many necking parties they had been on?

There are 46 names listed under the letter "Q" in the Shelby city directory, and every family name there is either Queen or Quinn—18 Queens and 28 Quinns.

Incidentally, Shelby has a few more Kings than Queens, there being 22 Kings listed.

The directory—that valuable source of material with which to fill up this space—also shows that there are three girls in Shelby by the name of Ruby Bridges. One lives on the Fallston road, another on DeKalb street, and the third on Blanton street. Two Mary Bridges and two Inez Bridges are also listed.

If these theatre managers in Shelby are as shrewd as we believe them to be, it won't be long now before the "It" girl will be showing in a talkie here—and to good crowds.

Wake Half the Night Weak and in Pain

After night I could not sleep," writes Mrs. Mary J. Roberts, 117 West Franklin St., Raleigh, N. C. "I would lie awake half the night. I was dizzy and weak, suffered frequently with pains in my side and small part of my back."

"When I was a girl, my mother gave me Cardui, and it did me so much good, I thought I would try it again. I took five bottles, and I feel like a new person."

"I think it is fine. I would advise every woman who is weak to try Cardui, for it has certainly put me on my feet."

Hoover Is Not Definite 'Dry'

Republican Leaders Say President "Misunderstood" On Wickersham Report.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Out of the consternation in republican ranks over President Hoover's supposed bone dry declaration in his special message sending the Wickersham report to congress came a series of significant rumors today to the effect that Mr. Hoover has been "misunderstood," that the door is still open for modification, and that the party may "start a plank for 1932 calling for a constitutional convention to act on the prohibition issue."

The ultra-dry Senator Fess of Ohio, republican national chairman gave open though cautious expression to the report emanating from White House and cabinet circles that Mr. Hoover had not turned his back on revision, that his message, construed generally as pledging him to a bone dry stand in 1932, does not commit him against modification, and that, in fact, Mr. Hoover is open-minded.

Cabinet Men Called. A series of significant developments preceded the circulation of reports that Mr. Hoover is liberal on prohibition. Late yesterday afternoon three cabinet members—Postmaster General Walter Brown, Secretary of War Hurley, and Secretary of the Interior Wilbur—were summoned to the White House.

After a private talk with Mr. Hoover, the cabinet advisers left, and Mr. Hoover's political secretary, Walter Newton, informed a few selected newspaper men that Mr. Hoover was being misrepresented in the press and in comments of public men, that instead of being against revision of the existing "dry" order, his message to congress specified only that he opposed the kind of revision which his commission had recommended.

BURKE DEPUTY WOUNDED IN BATTLE AT STILL

Morganton, Jan. 23.—Deputy Sheriff Elmore Wilson, who was seriously wounded in a gun battle with alleged moonshiners at a still near Snow Hill church, between Morganton and Marion, Tuesday night, has a fighting chance for recovery, it is reported at Grace hospital, where he is a patient. He has four wounds in the stomach and one in the arm.

His alleged assailant, Bill Lail, is at the same hospital, his wounds not so serious. A guard is kept with him.

Shelby Advertisers Keep On At The Job

Lexington Dispatch.

The Cleveland Star tells that a jewelry firm there will celebrate its thirty-fifth anniversary this year and in the telling quotes the head of the concern as saying that not a single week of that entire time had he missed having an advertisement in his local paper.

The Star adds that only one other store in Shelby is as old as this jewelry store, insofar as name and ownership is concerned. And this merchant has run an advertisement in every issue of The Star for twenty-five years, starting when the paper was a weekly and keeping pace with the semi-weekly and tri-weekly transformation of that publication. The bulk of the readers of a local paper keep reading it for many years and there grows up between them and the steady advertiser a bond of friendship that is linked by the home paper. Many who come and go make their contributions to a community but in the main it is those patrons and readers of the home newspaper who consider themselves "permanent residents" who
