Take Advantage of Preventive Medicine

Care Increases the Span of Life

Avail Yourself of the Health Benefits in Modern Knowledge of Disease, Urges Dr. Copeland, Pointing Out the Marvelous Progress of Medical Science in Recent Years

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D., United States Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WE have made great progress against disease. This is shown by the cutting in half of the nation's death rate since 1900.

Much of this decrease, of course, has been among infants. It is believed, however, there can be made a further great decrease in the present general death rate. Too many people have not as yet availed themselves of what is called preventive medicine.

Many diseases of infants, children and adults, can and should be prevented. The future of medicine and the future of the nation as a whole, lies, not in the curing of diseases, but in the prevention of diseases.

To a remarkable degree, public health can be bought. Unfortunately, there are too many communities that neglect to do the things that prevent disease. There are too many individuals who will not take advantage of their opportunities.

Since the discovery of the toxin-antitoxin control of diphtheria, the death rate of this disease has been reduced 95 per cent. If all parents would take their children to physicians for injection against this disease, there would be no diphtheria.

With care in the cleanliness in the homes and city streets, with proper supervision of the water and milk supplies, and protection against flies, typhoid fever, at one time a very common disease, is now comparatively rare. There is now available a vaccine that protects against this disease.

Wherever typhoid fever does exist, it may be said to be due to carelessness. This carelessness is either that of the individual or of the community. Ignorance in these matters is almost criminal.

We look forward to the day when preventive medicine and care of the public health will become a national affair. War must be declared on all diseases that can be prevented and which still cripple the nation. It is true that the health of the people of the United States and Canada is far better today than it was in 1900, but there still remains much to be done.

This is a subject which should be taught in the schools. It should be discussed in the home. The press, the pulpit, the radio—these agents for good should be enlisted even more than they now are in spreading health-knowledge.

Play For Orphan To Be Given Palm Tree

Last week's issue of The Star carried a notice of a play to be given by the Belwood citizens for the benefit of an orphan girl of the community who has contracted tuberculosis. The play itself was a great success and a nice sum of money was realized.

At the invitation of the membership of Palm Tree church the play will be given there on Friday night, at 7:30. The title of the play is "The Minister's Wife's New Bonnet." There will be no admission charges but a freewill offering will be taken for the benefit of the young lady who is ill.
