"Love Mart" Flourishes in Movie Colony

Woman Bares Secrets of Love "Bazaar" and Tells How Girls, Between 15 and 19, Were Card-Indexed to Await Wealthy Patrons

(By ALICE ALDEN.)

Hollywood, Calif.—Youth for sale, beauty at bargain rates, wealthy patrons putting in an order for a lovely little blonde to add lustre to an evening's entertainment. These are the highlights of the story of a hideous trafficking in young girls that has just been disclosed with the arrest of the principal figures in Hollywood's love bazaar.

Girls of School Age. Details of the medium whereby beautiful girls could be ordered for an evening's entertainment—and no questions asked, were whispered about in Hollywood and its environs for some time, but the film colony is reputed to be shocked at the revelations of the far-flung operations and ramifications of the girl emporium where elderly millionaires could buy the attentions of girls of school age.

Mrs. Olive Clark Day, one of the three arrested and arraigned on these hideous charges, asserted that her stock, which was carefully card-indexed and classified, was recruited from pick-ups in the street, pick-ups that were always young, fresh and pretty.

Arrested with Mrs. Day are her common-law husband, William Jobelmann, and John P. Mills, wealthy real estate operator. Numerous girls, including Alice Blake, told the district attorney of the activities of Mrs. Day's "love market."

$20 The Price. Two hundred dollars for youth and beauty. That was the standard price of the wares at the love-mart. The girls received approximately $20 each out of this. Twenty dollars in exchange for all that girlhood holds dear.

No wonder Mrs. Day constantly reiterated to her girls that nothing was wrong, only thinking makes it so! And what of the patrons, the elderly men of wealth who made the business so profitable by their insatiable demand? One of them kept a regular order for a new girl each week and others were noted for frequent re-orders. Many of them are known to be hiding from the authorities but it is believed that sensational revelations will be forthcoming when several millionaires are arrested and confronted with their victims.

Dazed by Lights. Surely the love syndicate could have selected no better location than Hollywood for their nefarious trafficking.

Life is soft, it is luxuriously easy here and the eye is constantly dazzled by the beauties to be found in even "one-arm" restaurant. For to Hollywood flock beautiful girls from all over the country, town girls, little timid "country-mouse" girls who never knew anything more exciting than a trip to the county fair, before they came west. Girls lured by the glamorous possibilities offered by the movies. Girls who are certain that they can turn the trick and tread the rose-strewn path to stardom, that rose-strewn path that is also replete with sharp, ugly thorns.

Still They Come. And so, they pass, this unique array of beauties, easy prey for love syndicates and others who traffic in tender, young loveliness. For despite constant warnings by the chamber of commerce and other civic bodies as well as welfare societies, each train continues to deposit its cargo of beauty at the film center. Some are plentifully supplied with funds, others have but a few dollars after they arrive. But all are confident of quick success or at least work as extras almost at once. And then come the weeks of making the rounds of casting directors and agencies, where to their amazement, these girls meet other beauties, exquisite girls, who haven't worked steadily in months. Often Go Hungry. Some of the girls are sensible. They take work in stores, in offices, in restaurants, glad to do jobs that they would never have thought of doing back home. But others hang on, clutching at each shadowy hope and promise, certain that they will succeed. They often go hungry, thus making them easy prey to the stranger who talks to them so sympathetically while he stakes them to a good meal. With money gone, hope gone, clothes shabby, dark despair enveloping these beautiful creatures, it is not difficult to see how love markets can flourish and constantly replenish their stock, so that their wares can be kept fresh and alluring. Far more terrible than any manufactured melodrama is the heart-rending story of Hollywood's party-girl revelations.

Should Salaried Husbands Permit Wives to Retain Commercial Positions?

Despite Orations of Reformers That Woman's Place Is in the Home, Analysis Reveals the Weaker Sex as Keen Competitors of Man, Winning Laurels in Commercial Pursuits.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Probably the most unpopular gentlemen among married women today is Assemblyman Arthur L. Swartz, of Buffalo, New York. In a discussion with Mrs. Madred Palmer, secretary of the National Women's party, the assemblyman upheld his views and stated that woman was infinitely more important in Lynn discharged more than 100 women whose husbands were able to support them, according to the investigators. The places of these women will be taken by widows, spinsters and flappers. How many of the latter are supported by their papas is a factor which has not been investigated.

Already the marriage rate is declining, which may be due to economic depression, but why put such a price on marriage?

The findings of the woman's bureau, according to Mary Anderson, of the state department of labor, reports that "based on scientifically-conducted investigations, show that the majority of married women who are working are doing so because their wages are necessary for the support of the home and family."

This deals with the matter from an economic standpoint. Another fact is that many women who enjoy office positions are unfitted for the duties of the kitchen. Perhaps a week of their cooking would give a friend husband a different view on life.

Another aspect is presented by the husband who wants his wife to go to work. There is, for instance the case of Smith vs. Smith, in the Supreme court, Brooklyn, N. Y., where it is alleged that Mrs. Smith wanted more money, so her husband told her he would pay her way through business college so that she could get a job.

There are several instances in which woman has shown to be more than equal to man in the field of industry and, through her efforts, have reached a place in the commercial life of the nation, which it is even doubtful, that with equal opportunity, could be attained by man.

Among the outstanding feminists who have proven their ability in the field of industry, are Alice Foote MacDougall, who began her now famous restaurant business at 29. Twenty years later she was the owner of a $2,000,000 a year business.

Another example is Mrs. Anna E. Keyser, executive assistant in the office of D. H. Hoover, chief of the Federal Steamship Inspection service, who is said to know ship construction from bow to stern.

Women not alone show their mettle in the industrial world. They have also taken their place in the realms of science. A notable instance is that of Dr. Florence Sabin, celebrated throughout the world for her constant research for the purpose of mitigating human suffering, through which she has over a woman's place is also in the medical laboratory.

Around The Carolina Theatre

(With Apologies To RENN DRUM.)

We have had any number of our patrons tell us they saw "EAST LYNN" in Charlotte last week and they intended seeing it again. This speaks mighty fine for this show. Maybe we had better get our ropes out for this show next Monday.

The Parent - Teachers of Graham School will have one of the SATURDAY MORNING shows this Saturday, at 10:00 A. M. The picture will be "THE SPOILERS," featuring GARY COOPER. The admission is 10 cents to everybody. Proceeds will be used for books and curtains at that school. If you can't come send your DIME to the GRAHAM SCHOOL, and it will be appreciated.

We are having a goodly number of comments on our FAMILY TICKETS, the holders of these are rather proud of them.

Just read a review on FREDRIC MARCH'S newest picture, "HONOR AMONG LOVERS." Claudette Colbert is his leading lady, and they say his work is great. Yes, we have it coming.

Willie, motioning to a scene in the Fox News, "Mother, look at that big fish." "Hush, honey, that is only a zeppelin," replied his mother. Submitted by R. L.

WANTED: NICE REFINED young lady for cashier, references required. Phone 446 for appointment.

WE THANK YOU!
