Ellenboro Man Wins Poultry Show Money

(Special to The Star.)

Ellenboro, Mar. 17.—As a result of exhibiting his prize White and Partridge Wyandotte chickens at the Central Florida exposition recently held at Orlando, A. S. Harrill won a total of $47.00 in cash.

In addition to winning about all the prizes in the classes in which he exhibited he was awarded the honor of having the best cockerel in the show.

Mr. Harrill has been exhibiting chickens for about twenty years during which time he has won between $2,000 to $3,000.

Oklahoma City.—Three Oklahoma City scientists reported that 18 months of intensive study of paralysis caused from drinking impure extract of Jamaica ginger had resulted in discovery of no cure and only slight hope of beneficial treatment.

A report signed by Dr. L. A. Turley and Dr. H. A. Shoemaker of the Oklahoma university school of medicine, and Dr. D. T. Bowden, former director of the state laboratories, said tricesyl phosphate had been isolated as the drug which crippled hundreds in the South and Southwest last year. They said the chemical "destroys nuclei or nerve cells permanently."

Clothiers Pick Perfect Man and Design Summer Dance Suit

Before Clothes Can "Make the Man," the Man Must Have Figure and the Knack of Wearing Them—Despite Conventions, Average Man Is "Well Dressed" If He's Comfortable.

JOHN TEMPRE PRINCE OF WALES RAYMOND DUNCAN JAMES J. WALKER

New York.—When the Clothing Designers Executive association met recently in New York, that august body set the machinery in motion for the annual attempt at masculine clothing reform. One of the purposes of the convention was accomplished when the committee selected the "perfect man" from a field of 300 applicants. The winner of this singular title is John Tempre, 28, of New York. According to the C. D. E. A., Mr. Tempre has the ideal figure for the correct wearing of clothes. And to prove it they modeled a new summer afternoon dance suit on the lines of his perfect frame.

This business of wearing clothes correctly is a subject that should be included in high school curriculum along with the subjects that equip the pupil with the means for acquiring the clothes. Some men can don a $20 suit and look as if they had just stepped out of the pages of a sartorial magazine. Others are specially tailored by experts yet give the impression of having slept in their clothes.

It is this art of carrying his raiment that has earned for Adolphe Menjou the title of the best dressed man in moviedom. Not that Mr. Menjou hasn't the very best duds that money can buy; it is said that the star could change his complete outfit three times a day for a year without wearing the same suit twice.

Americans, particularly New Yorkers, regard Mayor James J. Walker, affectionately known as "Jimmy", as the peak of sartorial perfection. No one has ever seen Hazzoner appear otherwise than as if he had just been unpacked from a bandbox. Like Mr. Menjou, Jimmy, is a past master in the art of carrying his clothes, and from the sales of his faultless footgear to the crown of his imitably tilted hat he is the last word in style.

But it is to his Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, that the honors for the greatest influence of men's fashions must go. Prince Eddie is considered one of the world's foremost connoisseurs and leaders of masculine styles. He has but to wear a certain type of collar, hat or tie and the youth of the world will follow his lead.

Every once in a while a movement is started rolling to make the male fashion-minded, but, so far, they have all ended in that conservative creature just sticking to the old tried and true standard.

Last summer an attempt was made to popularize shorts for hot weather wear. It was doomed to failure from the moment of its inception for the simple reason that men's knees crave privacy. They do not lend themselves to publicity, lacking as they do the beautiful, rounded symmetry that distinguishes the limb of the female of the species.

After all, why bother about styles? The term "well-dressed man" is merely a matter of viewpoint. The average man considers himself well dressed if his clothing is neat and comfortable and he is quite happy if allowed to follow his natural inclinations in the way of what he shall wear.

Raymond Duncan, brother of the late Isadora Duncan, has emancipated himself from the slavery of clothes. He makes his own and they consist of a long togalike garment, a pair of sandals and a piece of string around his head. The purpose of the last named article isn't quite clear but accuracy forbids its omission. Mr. Duncan in that outfit looks like a carbon copy of an old Roman senator, who would want to resemble Jimmy Walker when it's so easy to look like Julius Caesar?

Even Alfonso's worst enemies haven't put a bonus bill up to him.—Boston Transcript.

Gin Orgy Death Trial Starts

The trial has opened at Valparaiso, Ind., of Virgil Kirkland, who is charged with the slaying of 18-year-old Arlene Draves. The police allege that after a party, at which gin flowed freely, Kirkland and four other youths criminally attacked Miss Draves.

Being unable to arouse her, they took the girl to a doctor. On discovering she was dead, the doctor notified the police. Picture shows, left, the late Arlene Draves. Upper right, Judge Grant Grumpacker, who is hearing the trial; lower right, Virgil Kirkland in court.
