

Boulder Dam Project Gets Under Way

The greatest engineering feat ever undertaken in the United States, ranking second in magnitude only to the Panama Canal, is the Boulder Dam project. The contract for harnessing the giant Colorado River has been awarded to Six Companies, Inc., and the work will be under the supervision of William H. Wattis, president of the company (left inset). The machinery of this giant project has been set in motion by Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur (right), pictured with Dr. Elwood Mead, Commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, as the contract calling for construction was officially signed. "Fight Like Hell, Yell Like Devils" Said Campbell

(Another of a series of articles on the Revolution leading up to the battle of Kings Mountain, written by W. E. White, county historian, for The Star.)

After the patriots had surrounded Ferguson's army on the mountain the first attack was made by Colonel Campbell. Before going into the fight the indomitable Virginia leader told his daring men to fight like hell and yell like devils. The first shot of the battle was fired by Philip Greever, a Virginia soldier. Immediately following this shot the Americans made a spirited attack upon the enemy. But the British were not panic-stricken, and soon they got into action. The Whigs depended upon their marksmanship, while the English and Tories relied chiefly upon their bayonets. With in a short time the enemy began a bayonet charge and drove the patriots down the side of the mountain.

But this temporary success of the British was of short duration. When they had repulsed Campbell's men they suddenly found themselves attacked from another side. The second blow for America was struck by the heroic Colonel Shelby with his division. This gallant leader had told his men to never shoot without seeing an enemy and to never see an enemy without bringing him down. Animated by such words as these, Shelby's patriots led by their intrepid commander, struck the rear of the enemy just as Campbell's brave boys were being forced back. But Colonel Ferguson was also equal to this emergency. So turning upon these new assailants he likewise drove them down the hill.

This British success, however, was equally as brief as the other. Still another American force was now coming into action. Colonel Cleveland and his troops had to cross a swamp to reach the enemy, and for this reason they were a little late about getting into the fight, but they got there just the same in time to accomplish something. Just as Shelby's men were being repulsed, Cleveland's "bull dogs" attacked the flank of the enemy. As the valiant Cleveland was approaching with his troops, he is said to have pointed towards the British and to have addressed his men as follows: "Yonder is your enemy and the enemy of all mankind."

Ferguson and his followers were in a very uncomfortable predicament. When they repulsed Campbell, they were attacked from the rear by Shelby, and they turned on the latter and drove him down the hill only to be struck on the flank by Cleveland. If they drove Cleveland back, they were again attacked by Campbell who had rallied his men. Onward the battle raged. The Americans concealed themselves behind rocks, trees, logs and bushes and poured a deadly fire into the ranks of the enemy whose bayonet charge accomplished little in the way of destruction. Several times the Whigs were repulsed, but each time they returned to the attack with renewed vigor.

One outstanding feature of the battle was the sublime heroism of the American officers. Colonel Campbell's horse gave out, but that officer led his men on foot, getting so far ahead of them at times in his zeal to win the fight that he was actually in danger of being killed by his own troops. Though a bullet passed through Colonel Shelby's hair, the gallant officer was unrepentant in his efforts for victory. Colonel Cleveland's horse was twice wounded and the big 250 pound fellow took it afoot with his troops shouting vociferously and urging them onward. But the subordinate officers were just as enthusiastic as were the leaders. All seemed to be determined to win or die. The American officers were everywhere in the thick of the fight and were using expressions like these, "Boys remember your liberty." "We must get them out of this." "A little nearer to them, my brave men." "Come on, boys, come on!"

The most heroic figure on the British side was Colonel Ferguson. Early in the fight the other British officer realized that the situation was hopeless and wanted to surrender. Twice the white flag had been raised, but each time Ferguson had cut it down, swearing that he would never surrender to such a d-d set of banditti. While attempting to break through the American lines the British leader was killed, and another white flag was raised which ended the battle.

My next article will deal with incidents connected with the battle of Kings Mountain.

There may be a good time coming as a financier has assured us, but all we can say is that it's a good time coming.—The Humorist.

Negro Attackers Stage Jail Riot

Gadsden, Ala. — Protesting against their sentences, eight negroes condemned to death at Scottsboro Friday for attacking two white girls rioted in the Etowah county jail Friday but were subdued by guards who placed them in irons.

The negroes, who were returned here under military escort after being sentenced for attacking the girls traveling as hoboes aboard a freight train, shouted demands for special food, beat on the cell bars and tore up the bedding.

Oaths they hurled at the court officers and white people generally were heard some distance from the jail, and Sheriff T. L. Griffin, who occupies an apartment on the lower floor of the jail, removed his family.

Sheriff Griffin appealed to military authorities for aid, and Colonel W. M. Thompson, commanding the 167th infantry, and Captain C. C. Whitehead, commanding Company "F" of the 167th infantry, went to the jail.

With sufficient guards to prevent an attempted break, the "bull pen" in which the negroes were confined, was opened, and guards went in and subdued the negroes, handcuffing them in pairs.

When finally quieted and asked what was the matter, one of the negroes replied, "We just don't like that death sentence."

Prevention Is Smarter Than Anthrax Cure

Take Precautions Against This Infection, Warns Dr. Copeland for It Is a Most Serious Disease.

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D., U. S. Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ANTHRAX is a disease contracted by persons who are working around infected animals. It may occur while handling or tanning, the hides of these animals, in the sorting of their hair or wool. It was frequently spoken of as "wool-sorter's disease."

The disease is caused by a germ called the "bacillus anthrax." Cattle grazing in pastures where these germs exist are stricken by the disease. They may be contaminated by the bites and stings of insects.

In man, of course, the disease is caused by infection. Usually this takes place through the skin. Almost always the condition is associated with an occupation in which there is contact with diseased animals or animal products.

The infection takes place through a hair follicle. In its early stage the trouble appears to be of no more consequence than a simple pimple. In appearance, it seems a mere trifle. As the disease is most serious in its results, early attention is important.

In a short time the pimple changes color, itches and burns. Inspection shows a purple center, an area of reddened skin. It may progress until it resembles an ordinary boil or carbuncle. It differs markedly from those two conditions in that there is very little pain.

The local effect of anthrax is spoken of as a "malignant pustule." As I said, it may resemble a boil or carbuncle, but it differs from them in having a central depression. This is surrounded by vesicles, small blisters. It is painless and does not contain pus.

These infections should receive immediate medical attention. No delay in seeking advice should be permitted. It is imperative that the condition be recognized and treated as soon as possible. Prevention is always better than cure. That is certainly true as regards anthrax. This is best accomplished by careful disinfection of the hides, hair, bristles and rags before they are given workmen.

Persons handling infected material should be protected by wearing gloves. In addition to this protection of the hands, the rest of the body should be adequately covered.

Answers to Health Queries
WONDERING. Q.—What is the cause of dark circles beneath the eyes?
A.—This may be due to lack of rest, dissipation, constipation, etc. If there is any tendency to the latter, correct it by watching your diet and taking plenty of exercise.

CRE. Q.—What can be done for scars due to acne?
A.—See a skin specialist for his advice. If the scars are not too deep, the X-ray is sometimes helpful in making them less noticeable.

E. J. H. Q.—Would a stomach condition cause incessant coughing?
A.—No. Have an examination to locate the source of irritation and then definite advice and treatment can be outlined.

The right way to use the new HUMIDOR PACK

1 Do not tear Cellophane. Look for the convenient flap at the top and back of package

2 Simply lift this flap and you will break the specially devised air-tight seal

3 Hold package as shown and with your thumbs push it part way out of Humidor Pack

4 To avoid tearing tin foil, slip first finger of each hand under Revenue stamp and break it

5 Help yourself to a fresh cigarette, then slide package back into its Humidor Pack

6 Close package. It guards Camels from dust and germs and provides sanitary protection

THE moment you open the new Camel Humidor Pack you begin to note the advantages of this new, scientific and sanitary method of wrapping Camel cigarettes.

At once you are greeted with the delightful aroma that comes from choicest Turkish and mellowest Domestic tobaccos in prime condition.

Your sense of touch also detects the freshness of Camels, for unlike moisture-robbed cigarettes Camels are pliable to the fingers.

But the real difference comes when you light a Camel and inhale its cool, fragrant smoke.

Cigarettes brought to you so perfectly conditioned deserve to be kept that way in your pocket.

The simplest way to insure this is to open the Camel Humidor Pack as shown above.

That will keep intact the mildness and freshness that is making the whole country say: "Now I'd walk two miles for a Camel because they're twice as good."

If you haven't tried Camels in the new Humidor Pack, switch over for just one day.

Then go back tomorrow if you can.
