

Arrows From A Quiver

(By J. Marvin Nichols, Dallas, Tex.)
The soul best discovers itself in the eyes of another.

Why not forgive? After all, we've such a little time to live.

When love goes out, stagnation, suffering and death come in.

What you are today you will be tomorrow; only more so.

You narrow life the moment you doubt yourself.

You measure strength at its weakest point.

You were put here to be a victor—not a victim.

You may fool the other fellow but you can't fool yourself.

No man can amass a fabulous fortune and at the same time hold absolutely intact the finer virtues of the soul.

Of the worst of men it can at least be said—their lives are useful in so far as they show what all men ought not to be.

The most terrific appeal is always hidden. But the heart is a shrewd detective; it sees beneath every disguise.

The most serious and delicate questions of life are the sort that set us apart from the rabble—and we decide them alone.

You cannot go deeper into another's heart than your self-knowledge is competent to guide you.

Nine times out of ten a thing that cannot be done in the ordinary way can be done some other way.

Riches carry their own penalty, and the least being idleness and no opportunity of doing productive labor.

"Loyalty" is overworked. Disloyalty to the views of those none better than ourselves means loyalty to those who follow after us.

Two new phases of life loom into view these latter days—Conspicuous waste and conspicuous leisure. Both are built on blood and are bought with the price of souls.

PANCAKES ARE SERVED

Today—tomorrow—serve pancakes—true Southern style—with butter nestling in between—and a generous covering of Golden Crown Syrup to bring back memories of old Southern days.

Golden Crown and pancakes always go together—never apart—like the moon and moonlight. The true Southern flavor is in Golden Crown. To serve hotcakes right, serve them with Golden Crown Syrup.

QUEEN VICTORIA IN REGAL ROBES

RELIEF FROM ROYAL COURT FORMALITY—DANCING AT A FETE.

"Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown"—This fact has again been brought home to Queen Victoria of Spain, as she bade farewell to the land over which she had ruled with Alfonso XIII. From the simple life of a British Princess, she had a quarter of a century ago become a part of the court of Spain, puzzled by its restrictions and formality. The road from carefree Kensington Palace to Madrid was not a path of roses. Disliked by the people of her husband's kingdom, because she was a foreigner, the mother of an ailing family, her first born, suffering from an obscure blood disease, her second son, a deaf-mute, it would appear that her cup of sorrow had been filled—without being forced to exile from the land over which she had ruled. Perhaps fate will deal more kindly with the dethroned Queen who may return again to the land of her youth, far from the strife that was hers as Queen of Spain.

Just Fishing and Waiting

While waiting for some definite action from Estelle Taylor, his wife, Jack Dempsey, former king of the fist world, decided to investigate the trout streams of Nevada. Jack is pictured with his guide casting a line outside Reno, while it remains undecided whether he or Estelle will make the first move to break the matrimonial bonds.

Hardly.
Dealer: Shall I send the clothes-horse you ordered.
Customer: Send it! Did you think I intended to ride it home?
