"Only Medicine That Ever Did Our Condition Any Good"

Read what this prominent Richmond (Indiana) couple have to say about the remarkable relief that MALVA brought to them. "We were troubled with kidney, liver, and bladder trouble, accompanied by constipation and other symptoms of a severely disordered stomach. Our systems were weak and run-down, and we had begun to feel the pains of rheumatism. We are mighty thankful today that we took MALVA, as it has brought us relief where all other medicines had failed."—Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Abbott, 413 West Seventh Street, Richmond, Ind.

MOTHER LOVE

By OLIVER PENDLETON

In all the world there is no love so pure, so unselfish, so constant as Mother's love. It is akin to divinity itself—this love of mother for child—love which passeth all human understanding. Who but a mother can know such devotion! And who can measure the influence the spirit of motherhood has had upon a world that would have been bleak without it?

A mother's love begins when her child grows under her heart. It flowers into eternal affection when she goes down into the valley of the shadow to give it life. It becomes an inseparable bond when the helpless infant feeds upon her bosom. However sleepless the nights which follow may be for mother, her love keeps uncomplaining vigil. And so the little one grows, happy and carefree, unaware of the boundless love which has been lavished upon him.

The years come and go and the children her call of the world. All too soon, the little children, who have made the home happy for mother with their play and laughter, grow into young men and women. When they leave the home, mother remains with her memories of the infant smiles, the tiny hand-clasps, the first faltering steps, the joyful shouts and scuffles. Her love endures, her faith never falters. Regardless of how rough the going is in the world, mother's loving arms are always the kindly shelter they were in those days of infancy.

The second Sunday in May has been designated Mothers Day for public expression of our love and reverence for the mothers of our country. In 1914 our Congress fixed this day in honor of mothers because "the service rendered the United States by the American mother is the greatest source of the country's strength and inspiration."

Mothers Day will be observed in all the states. Special services will be held in the churches. The beauty of Christian motherhood will be exalted in sermon and song.

The white carnation has been chosen as the floral emblem of Mother love because of its sweetness, purity and endurance. If mother is living it will make her heart happy again to receive a letter from son or daughter at a distance, recalling the happy days of childhood. The affairs of our own lives may have caused forgetfulness of the childhood days, to us, but not to mother. For her they are a part of her life.

Let us remember mother citreer in the year to come with letters and kindness and love. Our tenderest devotion can but repay in a small part the ineffable love and gentleness bestowed so unostentatiously upon us by the most precious friend of all, mother.

If mother has passed on, let us live so that mother, could she know, would be proud of her child in whom she always had faith. (Furnished for reprint by W. G. Spake.)

Don't Overlook
"Mother Day"

Shelby Citizens Urged To Remember Their Mothers on Sunday, May 10th.

Just a little reminder to you folks who live in Shelby. Of course, it should not be necessary to remind you at all, but for fear that some one may permit business engagements and transactions to overshadow everything else, this little hint is given just at this time: Sunday, May 10 is Mother's day.

Now that covers a span of nearly 24 hours, but in reality folks, every day is mother's day, no matter whether it is set aside for observance or not. She is the one person in all of this world to whom you owe everything. Just tuck that away under your hat and think it over. Back of every achievement which has been accomplished since the beginning of time, there was a mother.

Whether you've climbed the ladder to success or whether you are still plodding along, don't forget your mother on May 10. If she is still with you, so much the better, she can see and appreciate what you do for her. If you are not so lucky, well, remember her in the way she would have had you to.

She may be old and wrinkled, but don't forget this. You are still her's and she is looking to you with much the same hope that she did when first you saw the light of day.

Remember her Sunday. Perhaps you may not be able to bestow costly gifts on her. Perhaps you may not be able to take her a gift of any kind that would call for an outlay of cash money. You can go to see her, and surely you can find a flower or two. She'll appreciate these just as much as though it was the costliest of gifts. Mothers are just that way.

If you can go to see her Sunday, do it. If you can't go, call her over the telephone and talk to her, and if this cannot be done, then send her a telegram or write her a letter which will reach her on that day.

Just remember this: you'll never have but one mother, and in her you have the closest friend you can ever have, and one who will stick to you through thick and thin right to her as long as you can.

Arrows From A Quiver

You can't judge the worth of a diamond by its rough exterior. The Indians of the lovely Pacific often toyed with nuggets that afterward made millionaires.

While we believe the material progress of this country has been simply prodigious, yet we seriously question a corresponding growth in our ideals and our literature.

No man is accomplished and influential scholar, no matter his plumes of diplomas written in dead languages, until his theory and his practice become one and the same. The foal of the racer will never know his speed nor will he ever discover his powers if always pastured with the common herd destined for the collar and the yoke.

Once a kid said that inconsistency was the awful licking he got for telling a story, in contrast with his daddy's statement that it hurt the old man worse than the boy. Many a man has wondered over that very same inconsistency.

Strange that every fellow thinks he has the only hard job in the world. In one single chapter of a recent novel we noted that the heroes countenance fell, his voice broke, his heart sank, his hair rose, his eyes blazed, his words burned, his blood froze. Say, fellows, you've had no such luck as that!

Apparently, we have forgotten a few of the erstwhile simple things in life. A backward look will reveal them as the big things. Get the habit of happiness. Utilize your enthusiasm. The world is hungry for faith. The young man is the future incarnate. Let every failure teach you the game. Public confidence is the young man's best asset. Get down to earth; that is where the people live. The world is not down on you; it is just busy, that is all. A man who won't get up when he is knocked down is no man at all. These are all workable problems.
