CERTIFICATE OF DISSOLUTION.
State of North Carolina, Department of State. To All to Whom These Presents May Come—Greeting: Whereas, it appears to my satisfaction by duly authenticated record of the proceedings for the voluntary dissolution thereof by the unanimous consent of all the stockholders, deposited in my office that the Stony Point Mutual Light and Power company, a corporation of this state, whose principal office is situated at R. F. D. No. 1, in the town of Shelby, county of Cleveland, state of North Carolina, its charter being the agent thereof and in charge thereof, upon whom process may be served, has complied with the requirements of chapter 72, Consolidated Statutes, entitled "Corporations, preliminary to the issuing of this certificate of dissolution."
Now therefore, I, J. A. Hartness, secretary of state of North Carolina, do hereby certify that the said corporation, on the 28th day of April, 1931, file in my office a duly executed and attested consent in writing to the dissolution of said corporation, executed by all the stockholders thereof, which said consent and the record of the proceedings aforesaid are now on file in my said office as provided by law.
In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal at Raleigh, this 28th day of April, A. D. 1931.
J. A. HARTNESS, Secretary of State.

Nina's Warning.
Renchora and Iwolo seemed to think we could lick any attackers and of course I thought so also. A clear case of never say die. The ship's crew were all working boys and although they would fight their best we relied very little on them. The engineer, a half breed called Davis now coupled up two hoses which were to throw scalding water on anyone attempting to board whilst Iwolo and myself with our rifles piled up Manchester goods in a ring and determined to hold our own from aft. The old captain armed with a sixshooter and cutlass seemed nervous but I soon had him in a good humor by spinning yarns. We were about all ready for anything when a canoe came alongside. It was Nina, the head man and a couple of his witch doctors and Nina spoke to me first. She was nattily dressed in the European togs I had given her and spoke in a firm voice which I understood come and see us at once, you will receive protection if not you will be attacked and will surely die. She looked me steadily in the eye as she spoke and insisted in my following her at once.

Spotting Them.
I thanked her at once but told her I had a surprise in store for anyone if they cared to come and try at this she smiled and said don't be foolish they don't want to kill you I will see to that, but your boat is fast they are ready to attack you and I give you this chance, come with me. I told her how thankful I was to her but I could not leave the ship. I had got it into trouble and would get it out. She said no more but I noticed a water blot you call a tear in her blue eyes. I waved her goodbye we said no more she had risked her life to save me.

dependent so I turned the big paddles round and dropped anchor at Ninas Sacred town. The inhabitants seemed afraid of us to begin with but I hailed the Sacred chief who came off in his best canoe along with several of his witch men. I received them well on board but let them see I was prepared for any eventualities that might arise. This was a good advertisement as they had seen how well we had disposed of our enemies without a scratch. I noticed he had his weather eye on our rifles and took all in I never even mentioned the battle only to say that anyone who was foolish enough to bother us would regret it and furthermore I told him my wishes had all been granted and if he wished I would come on shore and make another wish. He said I could wait till they had composed their eyes as there had been quite a number of influential men on shore who had been shot. And of course I was sorry especially as Louis son had been killed.

Luck and Victory.
And now a fleet of twenty put out from Neugouis but shared a worse fate as we popped in a few shots at said you offered me protection if I would leave the boat and I shall always be thankful furthermore I have come here purposely to reward you for all your good action now the battle is over and I want you to make peace with everybody on my account.

A Note From Nina.
These wise men now had a confab and said they understood me exactly and would be glad of any help I could give to commence peacemaking. I asked them to state what they wanted and they said five cases of gin and two bottles of rum and they would begin to move away every evil spirit in the river after which there could be nothing but peace. I had the gin and rum placed in their canoe at once and they promised to return and tell me how they had gone in spirit land but begged me not to come on shore until they returned.

In about two hours the sacred boat put off with Nina and the old chief at the bow standing. She looked radiant and in the stern sat Chief Isogi, who seemed to be depressed. He disclaimed all blame for the attack and blamed the creek men who had acted without orders. I made them all welcome and treated them as if nothing had happened. Nina was dressed in European style and on parting shook hands with me leaving a short note ("Trust no one" or "Beware").

I noticed the chiefs eyes cast on my rifle brigade and especially old Iwolo whom they all knew as the best fighter and general of the whole Cammas. They all went off smiling but could not help seeing that we were alert. I had made a good impression on them and as they had spotted many a ship in this very spot and I knew they were treacherous to a man I felt proud as they retired friendly with my posse. All the same I had steam always ready and sudden death to any false move were my orders to my fighting Chief Old Iwolo.

The river rose quickly and the captain reported ten feet or more in the channel between the long sandbanks. So we hoisted anchor and with a full head of steam were soon thudding away up the Ogowe. We woke up Isoga town on parting with three shrill blasts of our whistle and several ominous toots of the fog horn and as she was a powerful boat we were soon well away passing the most dangerous spot in the river with two feet of spare water under us. The natives along the bank cheered us lustily as we passed onward and eventually passing Her Shifts we were all safe and sound alongside the pier at Adiamanongo.

Miss Hasken.
There was a great gathering of traders ashore and discharging cargo was the order of the day. Sinclair was glad to see us. As the river fell slightly after our arrival, I took a good two days rest which I badly needed. Now the reloading traders purchases took place and early morning all being ready we sailed for fat-off Samba Falls. A young Presbyterian mission lady (Miss-) she was bound for Samba Falls and was the first white lady who ever visited there. I could not help but admire her courage.

Next to board us was Sinclair and we steamed toward Eninga where the blind king lived. Miss Hasken had a drawing pad on her knee and as we stamed by the villages she would make rapid sketches of the various places whilst I would tell her their history as far as I could. This seemed to interest her greatly.

CHEVROLET
73 of America's leading business concerns have bought 27,605 Chevrolets

Prominent among the thousands of concerns using large fleets of Chevrolets are many of the leaders of American industry. In fact, 73 outstanding business firms have purchased a total of 27,605 Chevrolet cars and trucks.

The reason for this preference lies in the unexcelled economy of Chevrolet cars and trucks, as proved by official cost records. These records show that 20 miles to the gallon is a common occurrence among Chevrolet cars. That oil expense is extremely low. That Chevrolet cars and trucks require only a minimum of service attention. That they give satisfactory low-cost service over exceptionally long periods of time.

Naturally, a car with such a fine record of economy represents an extremely wise investment for any buyer! Especially so, when you consider the many advantages that Chevrolet offers above and beyond economical operation. Come in and learn what these advantages are—what they mean in terms of style, comfort, safety, reliability and value.
