TWINKLES

Tomorrow is the Fourth—the one day in the year which may outclass Sunday as a day of highway slaughter. Remember that as you go motoring.

Shelby civic clubs should gladly cooperate in the movement to restore an evening outgoing mail here. No outgoing mail, east and south, after 6 in the evening until 7 the next morning, will work a handicap on business in this section.

Alexander the Great wept because there were no more worlds to conquer, but the flight around the world in less than 10 days by Post and Gatty would have sounded like the imaginative raving of an insane man to the conqueror.

"Much Canning In County This Year," informs a headline in our favorite tri-weekly. And with the State refusing to work prisoners with sentences shorter than 60 days it appears as if there will be right much of it going on for the remainder of the year.

Calvin Coolidge writes in his column that any nation which can weather an economic storm as America has been doing is in very sound condition and dependable. But we wonder if the former president had realized that it is hard for a nation to crawl out on a window sill and leap for the sidewalk from the fourteenth floor.

Various cities and towns in the Carolinas have been joining out recently that the heat hasn't been as unbearable in their cities as in others. That line of talk may be classified as A-1 publicity by the chamber of commerce, but our way of thinking it has been plenty hot everywhere in the two States.

Rev. L. B. Hayes today takes over the duties as president of the Shelby Rotary club, and knowing him as Shelby loes it is accepted knowledge that the civic organization is entering upon another good year of community service and the strengthening of friendships between men who are integral factors in the life of the city.

An Eastern Carolina newspaper hears of a man being killed in a mica mine not far from Shelby and remarks that town that way they did not know there were such mines in his section. But for this we may be thankful: It was not one of these eastern papers which, hearing of a new industry in this way, would immediately start clamoring for taxes to be taken over their lands and slapped on the industry up there.

BISHOP OPENS CAMPAIGN

BISHOP CANNON opened up his 1932 presidential campaign while on a visit to Charlotte this week. And, as usual, the good bishop leaves several gaps in his statements and declarations which are a bit puzzling.

If the Democrats will only nominate McAdoo in 1932, he declares, "the whole prohibition question will be lifted out of the campaign." Looking over that statement, The Charlotte Observer very aptly remarked, "but just how the nomination of McAdoo could bring that to pass is not explained."

Another puzzle, if you care to dig deeper into the statements of the politically-minded churchman, is this: If the bishop is against a candidate will it aid or injure the candidate? Or, to reverse it, if the bishop is for a candidate, how will that candidate's future be swayed?

PEACHES, VEGETABLES HERE

BELMONT MAN has called the attention of The Charlotte Observer to the fact that fine peaches are grown near Belmont, not so far distant from Charlotte, as well as the Sandhills. The Observer has been an ardent booster of the Sandhill peach section and is to be commended for that interest in the peach area, nevertheless Belmont is given proper credit. In that connection, it might be noted that outsiders are learning this year that many things other than cotton are produced in Cleveland county. Widely known as the average visitor to this section appears surprised to see anything else growing. A visit to the semi-weekly curb market in Shelby will reveal that some mighty fine peaches and fruits are produced by the farmers of Cleveland county. And, although they were an oddity to a certain extent hereabouts a decade or two back, Cleveland housewives are this year "putting up" more English peas than ever before.

All the Cleveland county eggs aren't being toted in one basket this year.

ANOTHER INVESTIGATION

IT SEEMS TO BE an open season for investigations inspired for political purposes.

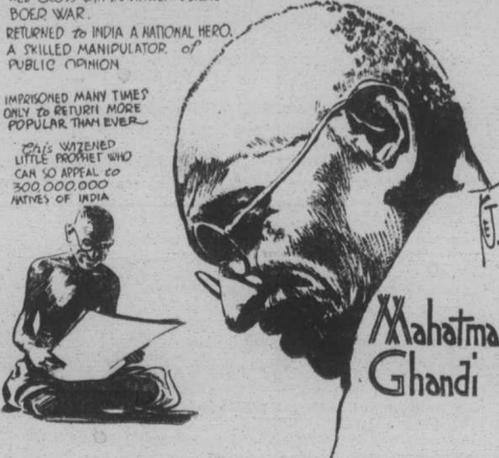

George Pritchard, overwhelmingly defeated for the United States Senate by Josiah W. Bailey, Democratic candidate, started an investigation. Just before that move Senator Morrison challenged the appointment of Chas. A. Jones as district attorney. Now we have a new one on our hands.

District Attorney Jonas nominated Attorney J. M. Hoyle of Gastonia, for a position as assistant district attorney. Congressman Bulwinkle, who defeated Mr. Jonas, soon let it be known that he would not indorse the Hoyle appointment until an investigation was made. The new phase developed when Neil C. Perry, World war veteran, suggested that when he talked to Mr. Hoyle, the Jones nominee, about a job as prohibition agent Mr. Hoyle intimated that he might endorse Perry if the latter were willing to do a good turn in return by contributing so much annually to the Republican campaign expenses. Mr. Hoyle said it 'warn't so' and Mr. Perry said 'tis'—and there you are.

First thing you know we may have enough investigations going on to relieve the unemployment situation.

SYNTHETIC FISHING

WE'VE HAD OUR synthetic golf, and our miniature this and miniature that, and being a town that is fond of fishing Shelby may be considerably interested in the announcement that synthetic fishing is the latest thing.

"In Los Angeles," informs The New York Times, where things move faster, trout fishing has been brought into the heart of town, so that a man may do his fishing on the way home from the office. A trout pool stocked with fish is now open for business on Wiltshire Boulevard, a fashionable Los Angeles thoroughfare.

"Already three 'synthetic fishing clubs' have opened within a half hour's drive of midtown.

"It is an economical diversion; you pay nothing if you catch nothing and only 35 cents for each fish taken. The fish may be cleaned, cooked and eaten on the premises, or tidily packed up and taken home. Miniature golf, already on the wane, must feel sorely the competition of this innovation."

STRIB'S LAST BIG CHANCE

TONIGHT THE STATE OF GEORGIA, incubator of athletic champions, may have another champion, and, again, may not. When tonight's Schmeling-Stribling battle is over, if W. L. (Young) Stribling, the Georgia boy, is not the victor and does not win his victory in a decisive manner, he will be through in the big time fight game.

The bout tonight lacks the color and glamor of other major boxing matches. The young German, Schmeling, has not been an idol since becoming champion because he won the crown once worn by Tunney—and by Dempsey, Willard, et al—on a foul. Nevertheless he is a fine physical specimen, better than the average boxer and can take plenty of punishment, or stand the gaff, as they say in sporting circles. If Stribling tonight is the Stribling that banged Risko all over the ring, or the Stribling that floored Scott, then the Georgia boy will be the heavyweight champion tomorrow morning, and a colorful one at that. But if he is the Stribling who boxed and danced and clinched with Sharkey and did likewise in many of his other big bouts, then he will be licked and no great number of people will be sorry. Stribling hasn't a peer as a boxer, but only upon rare occasions has he exhibited real fight. The fans who pay the fiddler desire fight when they go to a boxing match; they're not looking for fancy dancing and clever footwork about the ring. That's why Dempsey, the Manassa man mauler, could draw the crowds; he vaulted in like a tiger at the first bell and was just one lunging, hammering mass of battle until it was over. Stribling has his last big chance tonight; he has muffed more opportunities in big bouts and been given another chance than has any other fighter in the history of the game. He has shown that he can fight when he forgets caution, turns loose and lets go. The South naturally hopes it will be the fighting Stribling tonight, not the clever boxer. If such is not the case, the Georgia boy's future is fixed; he is headed back, and headed for good, to the tank towns where he may bowl over one palooka after another. Tonight is the turning point, the last big opportunity for him. If he comes through, another name will be added to the Georgia list which is headed by Bobby Jones and Ty Cobb. If he does not, it is the beginning of the trek down the hill on which there is no road leading back.
