Nobody's Business

GEE McGEE

flat rock news
... the barackers hell their annual picnic at the swimming pool Friday night and it was enjoyed by all, everybody except mrs. annie moosey fetched along a nice dinner which was spread on the ground, but she did not have nothing in her big old basket but a loaf of bread and a bottle of jam.

Puppy Love.
... My most serious love affair took place when I was about 15 years of age. She was in my class at school, and during the 4 months term, I almost went crazy about Annie May. I was so jealous of her, I did not like her brother to help her books and slate home.

... But true love never runs smooth. Archer Jones moved into our community from a small town and because he parted his hair in the middle and wore a neck-tie, darning if he home-fellers did just about all else our sweethearts. We plotted several times to kill him, but desisted. Some of us began parting our hair in the middle though.

... Our poleseman had a bad wreck one night last week while chasing a so-called bootlegger. He was right behind him in his ford and he stopped his ford so sudden that he could not stop his ford and he run into him and smashed in his back-end and also his front-end, but no whiskey was found. He had to pay him for his damages, as he was only returning from church in the county seat.

... One day at little recess, I thought I saw Annie May let Archer hold her hand a minute or two and then I let my dander rise sky high. I did not go to her nor did I walk up to Archer and slap him down. I began to write my feelings to Annie May on the slate and let her read them and she wrote her'n in return. We kept this up for 2 or 3 days, and to the best of my recollection, the following slate-notes passed betwix us:

... "Annie May: You don't mean nothing to me no more. I hope you and Archer will be happy after I am gone.
Your forgotten friend,
Gee."
... "Mr. Gee: Archer don't mean nothing to me, but he is a nice boy and I will go with him if I want to. I saw you working Jennie Sue's muly plication yesterday.
Your insulted friend,
Annie May."

... "Miss Annie May: Jennie Sue is my cousin and she asked me to work a sum for her, but I did not hold her hand like that allekhaired Archer done your'n. If you want to go out of my life, go ahead as my hart is broke already and you have done me dirty.
Gee."
... "Gee McGee: Here is that thumb-paper you give me and I would send back your old stick of candy if brother had not of it if up. You don't ack like no gen-terman, and if I can't speak to nobody but you, good bye forever.

A. M.

"Darling Annie May: I am so happy I can't say nothing. I ain't eat a bite since Saturday night, when I and you made up. I was so foolish, but I am glad Archer has moved off. Look for me soon.
Your precious,
Gee."

"Dear Sweetheart: I am happy too and can eat more candy. I am sorry you misunderstood me and I hope that old Archer will never return ere he dies. I love you. Yum-yum. Aw-revoir till tomorrow night.
Your devoted little,
Annie May."
