

Shelby G. O. P. Thinks Hoover To Be Failure

Former Postmaster Believes Democrats Can Defeat Hoover In 1932.

While the Democrats are already having word battles over their presidential choice for 1932, the Republicans are having some trouble of their own.

In this section George W. DePriest, former Cleveland county Republican chairman and former Shelby postmaster, "makes no bones" about his opposition to Hoover.

"The 'Engineer,' he declares has failed lamentably. He is, DePriest adds, the most unpopular president since Johnson, a one-term president, and sure defeat faces the G. O. P. if Hoover is nominated again.

No Executive Ability
Discussing his opposition to Hoover the former G. O. P. chairman here says:

"My opposition to the renomination of Herbert Hoover is based upon my sincere belief that he is a 'one term president.' He seems inevitable destined to take his place alongside of such men as Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan, Rutherford B. Hayes and Benjamin Harrison, as a 'one term president.'

"No president ever lost popularity so rapidly. I think I am safe in saying that he is the least popular president since Andrew Johnson, the only American chief executive ever to be impeached.

"Of course, it was not so much Hoover's popularity that elected him as it was the objection of the majority of the American people to having a Catholic sit in the White House. Governor Smith was a far more popular man, personally. If Smith had indicated anything like the independence of the pope which Mussolini has shown, the New York man would have carried many more States than he did.

"Mr. Hoover is a man of high intellect, an engineer who made six million dollars in his technical profession, and a man of high moral qualities. Yet a man may have all of these superior qualities, and more besides, and fail dismally as a president. Why?

"Because that rare quality of the human mind called 'executive ability' is the great outstanding requisite of the head of a great nation, the ruler of 120,000,000 people. Washington and Jefferson had it. Lincoln had it. Roosevelt had more of it than any man since Lincoln's day.

"No man can be a great President without being a great diplomat. "Elbert Hubbard defined 'execu-

INDIGESTION

"My work is confining, and often I eat hurriedly, causing me to have indigestion. Gas will form and I will smother and have pains in my chest. "I had to be careful what I ate, but after someone had recommended Black-Draught and I found a small pinch after meals was so helpful, I soon was eating anything I wanted.
"Now when I feel the least smothering or uncomfortable bloating, I take a pinch of Black-Draught and get relief."

tive ability' as knowing how to get others to do your work.

"Judged by this standard, President Hoover has failed lamentably.

"The new president tells his new congress that the need of the day was 'relief for the farmers.' He is unable to control or lead the new congress. It gets out of his hand and passes a most iniquitous tariff law, which has done more to upset business and clamp down the lid of depression in America and all over the world than any other one item among the causes of these evil conditions. And the farmers are in a terrible plight.

"Erecting our tariff walls so high as to shut off the flow of international trade in scores of important lines, we find other nations getting back at us by shutting their doors to Uncle Sam's products.

"Our American manufacturers have been driven to desert their own country, in a sense, for they have erected and are building factories in many foreign countries, so as to get within their tariff walls. Goods that were formerly bought from us are now made 'over there' and our industries are losing their foreign trade, which curtails production in the U. S. factories and results in depression here.

"The slump in production here makes for hard times here, and as we grow 'hard up' and our tariff walls slacken the inflow of foreign goods, the foreigners soon feel the 'slump' reaction. They grow hard up and can't even buy America's foods and other raw materials.

"The slackening of trade in every country means hard times everywhere. The thing becomes a vicious circle.

"Hoover signs the destructive tariff bill, but vetoes other important measures that would have contributed to 'better times,' such as the Muscle Shoals development, the Wagner Employment Bureau bill etc., and including the 'Soldiers' Bonus Loan, which was passed over his veto and which has been a godsend to the ex-soldiers in these troublous times. Hoover's veto of that Bonus Loan will lose him two million votes, if he again becomes the nominee of the Republican party.

"No president within recent times has been so overruled by congress nor had so many of his pet bills and nominations turned down.

"When T. Roosevelt desired something done by congress, he called in the leaders and often the smaller fry as well, and he was such a diplomat and super-salesman that he soon won them over to his way of thinking. Wherefore his administration stands out in history as one of great progress and constructive statesmanship.

"Hoover was steady as a logger-head with his first congress, and the new 'reputation' congress will tie him into a thousand knots.

"In electing Hoover half of the Southern States voted Republican for the first time since the Civil War.

"Hoover shows his 'gratitude' right off the bat by selecting his cabinet exclusively from the North and West not a Southern man considered.

"Come then a day when death makes a vacancy on the Supreme Court bench. He appoints Judge Parker. A fight ensues. The negroes and the labor unions jump on Parker. The senate bolts. They finally turn down Parker. A little Rooseveltian diplomacy would have served the Parker nomination. A Northerner is then appointed. The South has one representative on the high bench, the North eight. The Northern negroes avow that no Southerner shall ever again reach the Supreme bench.

"Florida turned Republican—voted for Hoover. (The influx of Northern Republicans, among whom were and are able lawyers and judicial timber, was mainly responsible for that turn-over).

"Hoover shows his 'loyalty' to the Florida Republicans by naming a strong Democrat (not even a Hooverite) as the Federal Judge of the Florida district.

"A 'noble' way to build up the Republican party in the South. Our Governor Max Gardner is moved to say, 'The most pitiful figure in American political life—the Southern white Republican. Looked down on by his neighbors, scorned by his brothers in the North, he is a political outcast, without hope of recognition.' (Not the governor's exact words, but his meaning.)

"Just how any Southern white Republican can show any enthusiasm for the Big Engineer, in view of Hoover's abandonment of his Southern supporters, is beyond me. He must, indeed, be a 'pitiful figure' if he takes it 'lying down.' As for myself, I will take mine 'standing up.'

"Mr. Hoover's anomalous position on Prohibition is another nail in the coffin of his political hopes.

"His seeming fondness for the Eighteenth Amendment has cost him the support of the great pivotal and vital Republican States, such as New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, and others, which showed their adoration of Hoover by going overwhelmingly Democratic last election.

"Regardless of our own opinion of National Prohibition in North Carolina and the South, the industrial North and much of the West have made up their minds that National Prohibition is a crime-breeder and threatens the integrity of the republic itself. They insist that the liquor traffic be 'controlled' to do that, the Eighteenth Amendment will have to go. The States will have to work out their own separate solution. Mr. Hoover is as poor a statesman on the Prohibition issue as he is on so many other things. He simply stands and stands no motion, on and for the 'status quo,' which is steadily growing from day to day.

"I approve of President Hoover's belated gesture of help toward the tottering German Republic on the moratorium matter. It is his first statesmanlike motion. But it will not save him from defeat.

"The Republican party must either refuse Hoover the nomination, or face certain defeat at the hands of a Democrat like Roosevelt or Baker. We can not win with him as our leader, so why give him a second nomination?

"Surely the great Republican party is bigger than one man. Surely the welfare of our great Republic is superior to the fate of one engineer.

"A great danger confronts the Republican party just now.

"Our great party has lost the presidency to only two Democrats (Cleveland and Wilson) in seventy years.

"Conditions may become reversed. Nominate Hoover, suffer defeat next year, let good times come back under a Democrat like Roosevelt, let the Democrats continue to outnumber us on States' Rights and the Prohibition question, and there is a danger that the Republican party may not taste victory again for a decade, indeed may disappear, like the old Whig party, which is displaced.

"This depression has succeeded in convicting the American people that the name Republican does not necessarily mean prosperity. I say this not in direct blame of Hoover for the hard times, as he was responsible only for that portion which arose by reason of the excessively high tariff, which he should have vetoed.

"This period in our history calls for a high order of statesmanship. The hour cries out for a strong man, of courage, of vision, of executive ability—a believer in liberty and the rights of each State to determine its own life and conduct in the matter of 'eating and drinking.' Back to the freedom of the fathers—to that liberty under which we grew great as a nation.

"Such a man is Senator Dwight W. Morrow of New Jersey. Under him the Republican party would emerge triumphant. My second choice would be Coolidge. But Hoover will pull us down to defeat. I shall support the Engineer if he is re-nominated, but I am against his nomination.

Cline On Program Of Commissioners At Asheville Meet

(Special To The Star.)

Raleigh, July 27.—The state association of county commissioners and county auditors meets at Asheville August 11-13, the opening session being devoted to welcomes and responses, the report of J. L. Skinner, secretary-treasurer, and the naming of committees.

President A. E. Cline, Cleveland county, delivers his address Wednesday morning, followed by F. P. Sprull, member of the State Board of Equalization, on "North Carolina School System in 1931"; E. B. Jeffers, on "The New Highway Commission," and a round table discussion on "County Problems," led by Charles M. Johnson, director of local government. The afternoon will be devoted to recreation and sight-seeing.

Thursday morning Director A. B. Brower, of purchase and contract, will speak on "State Purchase and Contract in North Carolina," to be followed by Senator Cameron Morrison on "Modern Government." The business will end with committee reports, election of officers and selecting a next meeting place.

The auditors meet Wednesday evening, hear from President J. A. Orrell, New Hanover, and Secretary Willis Booth, Guilford, and hold a round table discussion, elect officers and adjourn.

Resident Of Kings Mountain Is Fifth Victim Of Tragedy

Travis Hatley Dies In Hospital. Wife And Brother Killed In Train Crash.

Gastonia, July 27.—Funeral services were held in the East Baptist church here Sunday morning at 11 o'clock for W. Travis Hatley, of Kings Mountain and former Gastonian, who died Friday in a hospital at Albemarle as the result of injuries sustained two weeks ago in an automobile accident near Albemarle.

Four other persons, including his wife and brother, had died as a result of this wreck. Rev. Robert Chaney, pastor of the Second Baptist church, Kings Mountain, conducted the services and interment was in Hollywood cemetery here by the side of his wife, who was also a victim of the wreck. Until he moved to Kings Mountain a few months ago Mr. Hatley and family resided in Gastonia.

Men Asked To Wear Hats In Elevators

Charlotte, July 27.—Charlotte office buildings took on a metropolitan air today when men dashed up and down in elevators with their hats on.

Managers of most of the large buildings here have asked that the practice of removing hats in elevators be discontinued. Signs in most of the elevators read:

"Men are asked to please keep their hats on. Removing hats reduces elevator capacity and creates confusion. Thinking women will welcome this, it offers no disrespect and add to their comforts."

Cullen Mull Praised For Getting Markers

To the Editor of the Cleveland Star: I ask your courtesy to let me express my appreciation to Cullen Mull for his service and goodness in assisting the friends and relatives of the late soldiers of the Civil war, around Belwood, in locating the records of their service in the war, and procuring headstones from the government to mark their graves. I especially want to commend him for procuring a government monument for my father, as his name like lots of other ones, was never recorded on the rostrum for North Carolina troops. I am sure without the friendship and assistance of Mr. Mull, I would never have procured a government monument to my father's service in the war.

Mr. Mull has procured monuments for numbers of others near Belwood, and other parts of the county, for which he deserves much credit.

Yours truly,
C. G. Richards.

State Is Paying Off Indebtedness

Satisfactory Price for Prison Bonds But Buyers Skittish on Veterans' Loans.

State Treasurer Nathan O'Berry yesterday surprised an assembled group of bond buyers when he refused all bids on an offering of $900,000 in North Carolina bonds, and announced that as long as he is State Treasurer of North Carolina will sell no more bonds at a higher interest rate than 4 per cent.

Three bids on a 4 per cent basis were received for the $400,000 in State Prison bonds, but bond buyers proved skittish of the $500,000 offered in veteran loan bonds, and no bids were received for that offering except on a 4 1/4 per cent basis. Upon the return of Governor Gardner from New York, Captain O'Berry will recommend to the Governor and the Council of State that the bonds be sold at private sale. The State Treasurer is confident that he will receive a bid of 4 per cent or better.

Mock Chicken Legs

1 pound veal, 1-2 pound pork, 1 egg, cracker meal, salt, pepper. Have the butcher chop inexpensive cuts of veal and pork into small squares, as for stew. Wooden skewers may be procured from him at no extra expense. Place two pieces of veal on a skewer with a piece of pork in between. Mold to form leg of chicken. Dip in well-beaten egg seasoned with salt and pepper, and roll in cracker meal. Fry in deep fat slowly. When done, place in pan with sufficient water to steam and bake about one hour in slow oven. These are even more delicious when cold than hot and are ideal for lunches and picnic suppers.
