Former Champ Files Suit For Divorce At Reno, "Fight Of Century."

Reno, Nev.—Jack Dempsey filed suit for divorce Monday and his wife Estelle Taylor, immediately sent word from Hollywood that he had entered himself "in another battle of the century."

Jack charged Estelle with "extreme cruelty." Estelle replied that she would contest the suit, start another suit and thoroughly air the domestic difficulties of the former heavyweight champion.

Attorney Robert E. Burns filed the suit in the name of William Harrison Dempsey after he had negotiated fruitlessly for weeks with attorney for Miss Taylor. No specific allegations of cruelty were enumerated, the case was not placed on the court calendar, and the time of its hearing was indefinite.

Canning For Winter Charity

(Asheville Citizen)

"Almost everywhere this year the fruit crop appears to have been an unusually bountiful one. There has been not only the greatest abundance of fruit but the quality has been exceptionally fine. In any circumstances the urge to save as much as possible of such a crop should have been great. With conditions what they are at the present time it is not to be wondered at that efforts are being made in many places to encourage the canning and preserving and drying of the fruit which otherwise will go to waste."

Some one sends us a clipping from a Canadian newspaper telling of a movement of this kind in Canada; and there have been numerous advertisements and news stories in newspapers published in territory where fruits of various kinds are plentiful about orchardists who have invited those who were without money to buy fruit to come to their orchards and secure all that they could use. Even at a considerable distance from such orchards fruit is very cheap. The most delicious peaches have been available at prices that are ridiculously low.

Surely there is the opportunity in this situation for welfare agencies, by lending the proper cooperation, to enable many families to provide themselves with canned fruits against the coming winter. Not a few of these families already know how to do their canning and preserving if they were furnished with the supplies that would be required, the necessary sugar, also very cheap, and the cans or jars. A setup similar to that which did such valuable work with the woodyard in Asheville last winter might be able to accomplish equally valuable work in this matter.

We pass along the suggestion in the hope that it can be turned to profitable account.

Calls On South To Develop Self

Gov. O. Max Gardner, in a statement issued by the Southeastern Economic Council, called upon the Southeastern states to "develop their possibilities" for the "benefit of the entire section."

"Modern means of communication and transportation have undermined the very basis of social, political and economic isolation," the governor said.

"Just as America is finding herself irresistibly drawn into the main currents of world thought and politics by business, so do the states and sections of the United States find that ancient barriers have disappeared and their own economic self preservation depends upon the general business, health and prosperity of the whole country."

"North Carolina manufacturing textiles, furniture and tobacco to supply not only a country-wide but a world-wide market. The same is true of these and other lines of commodities of every state. If the farmers of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, or any other American state are not prosperous, it is the immediate and vital concern to Virginia, North Carolina and the rest of the country."

"The Southeastern states are subject not only to the laws and forces which underly and control the business and industry of a modern world but are peculiarly bound together by reason of the board unity which prevades the various states and gives direction to their own fundamental material interests."

"Through united approach, these states can develop their possibilities to the highest extent and do the entire section much benefit."

Ehringhaus Speaks In Clear Manner

Frankness Of Announcement Is Commendable. Support Gardner Program.

(Asheville Citizen)

Whether or not one agrees with the views set forth by Mr. J. C. B. Ehringhaus in his announcement of his candidacy for the governorship, the frankness with which he has stated his position on the controversial question now before the people of North Carolina commands respect and admiration. Later he promises to give the public a full and detailed exposition of his attitude toward the responsibilities of the office which he seeks. He has not waited for that, however, to let it be known that it is his purpose to champion "the record of the Democratic party in this State, both legislatively and executive," which can only be interpreted as meaning that he intends to stand by the policies adopted by the last legislature and by the program which Governor Gardner fostered. On the sales tax question Mr. Ehringhaus declares himself opposed to the imposition "of either the general or so-called luxury tax," indicating his intention to argue that either of these taxes would be paid in good part by those who are least able to bear the burden that this would involve.

Mr. Ehringhaus has won the reputation of being one of the best speakers in North Carolina and Tom Bost, Raleigh correspondent of the Greensboro News says that he is "a lawyer of great ability." Mr. Bost gives it as his opinion that "nobody east of Raleigh, or west, for that matter, has anything on him. He is a man of rare personal charm." Mr. Bost thinks that Ehringhaus and Attorney General Brummitt, who is also considering entering the race for Governor, stack up intellectually with the best the State has had. Furthermore, says Mr. Bost, since Ehringhaus comes from one of the extreme eastern counties, his opposition to any kind of sales tax probably means that at all events this will not be a sectional issue.

Interest in the governor's race has been very slow in heading up; slower than in many years in North Carolina. Lieutenant Governor Fountain and Mr. Ehringhaus are the only announced candidates up to this time. Mr. Fountain apparently being in opposition to the Gardner program. It is generally understood that Commissioner of Revenue Maxwell is a potential candidate for Governor. At all events, with Mr. Ehringhaus and Mr. Fountain formally in the race and with Mr. Brummitt and Mr. Maxwell testing out their probable chances, the prospect is that the campaign will soon begin to take on life. It is well that it should, for North Carolina's need of a strong and able man at the head of the State government to succeed Governor Gardner is great.

more years and I have long wished to undergo the sensation of having my funeral preached while I was sitting, instead of lying in a casket," he said, in explanation of the unusual affair.

"I am a great believer in tossing bouquets at the living rather than at the dead, and if any one has flowers for me I had rather they would throw them in my lap than on my grave. If the ministers wish to speak of my mistakes and imperfections they will have full liberty to do so."

The Rev. John B. Maulding of McLeansboro, one of the five preachers invited, was asked how he would speak. He said he would "try to talk as though this old man had passed on."
