

In Sea Mystery

A Federal grand jury will investigate the mysterious death of Hisashi Fujimura, rich Japanese silk importer, slain or lost overboard from a liner as it approached New York after a 'show boat' cruise.

Another thing difficult for the lay mind to grasp—raising a bumper crop so that the government can take a lot of it out of the market so that it won't interfere with the approaching bumper crop.—Boston Herald.

Woodman Field Day At Wadesboro Sept. 7

Field Day and Labor Celebration With Street Parade. Public Invited.

A general gala celebration will be held at Wadesboro on Monday, September 7th, Labor day, for the dedication of the community park and playground. The celebration is to be a joint event of the W. O. W. field day and general celebration, with the all-day program beginning at 10 a. m., including street parade, dedication and speaking exercises, family and group picnics, drills, races, contests, stunts, games, concerts, special features and concluding with a carnival street dance at 7:45 p. m.

A prominent speaker is being called upon to deliver the oration of the day and his address will feature the official dedication of the community park. This park and playground was established by the Wadesboro Woodmen and is the pride of the surrounding territory.

The races, stunts, games, contests and features will be open to everyone and attractive cash prizes are being offered in each event. Special cash prizes for the best floats, decorated automobile, etc., will be given, as will prizes to the largest family attending, the family travelling the greatest distance, the fattest man, the fattest woman, and the best clown. The events will be for the pleasure of all and Anson county will play Carnival host to her friends from the neighboring counties.

An official invitation from Woodmen and Anson county officials is extended to all white people or attend this gala celebration at Wadesboro on Monday, September 7 and take part in all events.

The man afraid of hard work will find life an unusually hard proposition.

Preserve Dairy Feed By Building Silo

Silage is a succulent feed, a good grass substitute, and will keep up the milk flow when pastures are short in summer and when green feed is scarce in winter.

'A well constructed silo provides the most economical source of dairy feed available for the man with a herd of ten or more cows,' says John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at State college.

'One acre of good corn preserved in the form of silage has a milk-producing value equivalent to about one and one-half acres when preserved in the form of shocked corn. There is a waste of about 50 percent in shocked corn when fed as stover. However, when corn is converted into silage, waste at feeding time is practically eliminated and the entire corn plant is consumed with relish by the cows.'

Silage is also a valuable supplement to dry feed in winter and helps to keep up the milk flow at a comparatively low cost. It is also economical for feeding dry cows and heifers above six months of age, says Arey.

He does not recommend a silo for a herd of less than ten cows. Succulent feed for smaller herds may be provided by pasture and soiling crops in summer, with the aid of root crops in winter.

The cash value of a silo was proven some years ago by a farm survey made in Wisconsin, says Arey. There were 531 farms studied and on 390 of these where silos were in use, the net income per farm was $340 more than on the 141 farms where no silos were in use. Mr. Arey offers the help of his office to any dairyman desiring to build a silo.

Sheep Have Place In Carolina Farming

Landowners seeking sources of additional income and a market place for surplus forage and other feedstuffs may turn to sheep on the farm flock basis.

'Farm flocks of sheep may be put in to advantage particularly in eastern North Carolina where there are few sheep at present,' suggests John E. Foster, animal husbandman at State college. 'The low price of cotton, damage by boll weevil and the need for more balanced farming methods is already causing many alert farmers in this section to add a few sheep. There are few farms on which there is not some waste land, some pasture or some extra forage crops which may be used to advantage in feeding sheep.'

Foster says the native ewe lambs may be crossed with pure bred rams to build up the flocks to where the lambs will be heavier than their dams. These cross-blooded lambs will also have better quality wool and a closer conformation to type. Farm flocks developed in this way may provide spring lambs for sale to the nearby markets furnished by the large cities of the East.

Sheep fit in well on any general farm, believes Mr. Foster. They glean from the fields that which would otherwise be wasted and they keep many injurious weeds under control. In eastern Carolina the flocks may be grazed throughout the year by turning them on cover crops after the summer pasturage has ceased to furnish sufficient grazing.

A good ram and a flock of native ewes may soon be turned into a profitable investment on any Carolina farm, believes Mr. Foster.

Cattle Feeding Pays Carolina Farmers

Two former New Jersey farmers bought residences and settled down in retirement in Craven county, near New Bern, two years ago. Sensing good possibilities in it, they bought 400 acres of cut-over land last fall. There were no improvements. They turned the place into immediate use by importing from Waynesville, 40 head of feeder cattle. These they fattened and sold at a good profit, although they had to buy feed and prices were low. Now they have erected a big barn and are growing feed, most of it on rented land, pending the getting enough of their own land in condition to plant. They are going to feed 100 head of cattle this winter. The two men are brothers, W. H. and R. S. Francisco, and have worked as partners 41 years.

'We are getting along in years,' says W. H. Francisco, the oldest. 'But for that, I think we'd make a lot of money feeding and even raising cattle down here where all the conditions are good. We went into it just to have something to do. I am surprised that more of it isn't done around here.'

The Franciscos specialized in livestock production when farming in New Jersey.

Double Springs Wins Game From Hollis Outfit

Each Team Has Won A Game Each. To Have Play-Off On Neutral Field.

(Special To The Star.) Double Springs, Aug. 26.—By playing one of the hardest and most uncertain games of the year the local Springers sprung a surprise on all the dopsters as well as the visitors by defeating the apparently semi-professional baseball nine from Hollis here Saturday. The score was 9-11.

The victory came as a result of a stinging defeat administered by the mountain lads a week ago and was made possible only by the concerted action in the field and at bat of every Double Springs player. John Moore did the hurling for the locals striking out several men and holding the others to a close margin. Withrow and Mode hooked the apple for the visitors and before the game was over both had it knocked all over the lot.

For hits Bill Davis and 'Lefty' Humphries copped equal honors both getting a triple, double and single, with Rush Davis and Lloyd Gabness coming for close seconds. Saturday's game made the score one all for the two clubs and the third and deciding game is to be played next Saturday. Arrangements are being made to have it played on neutral ground, either at Polkville or Lattimore.

Brandied Peaches Are Not Illegal?

Sheriff Clamp Of Anderson Gives Some Information Regarding The Law.

Sheriff Clamp, of Anderson, thus discussed on brandied peaches and home made wines to a reporter for The Mail.

'Brandied peaches are made by peeling the fruit, placing sugar over them and then sealing the mixture in an air-tight container. After a few weeks the peaches will have been transformed into an unusually fine variety of pickle, while the juice therefrom is a pleasant, although perfectly legal beverage.'

'Peach brandy, on the other hand is only one step removed from corn liquor itself. The peaches are allowed to ferment, much the same as corn or rye to be used for the same purpose, and just at the right moment the mash is distilled. The result is a variety of contraband liquor.'

The first of the two concoctions, the sheriff added, may be made for home consumption freely and within the law, however persons who feel inclined to experiment with the stronger drink will be subject to arrest and imprisonment in case they are detected, just the same as any other violator of the dry laws.

Sheriff Clamp suggested the extensive use of the bumper peach crop for making brandied peaches, although issuing a warning against the latter method of utilizing the surplus fruit.

Sheriff Clamp further stated that any variety of wine, up to five gallons, provided it is made for medicinal purposes, is perfectly legal.
