

Gardner Lauds Mountain Park And Its Future

Chief Executive Asserts Value Of Tourist Trade Cannot Be Underestimated.

Asheville, Aug. 31.—Governor O. Max Gardner Friday night advised the counties in and adjacent to the Great Smoky Mountains National park to advertise it and prepare to reap the benefits of "the stupendous opportunity which this park will bring to western North Carolina."

The governor spoke at a banquet before an audience of county commissioners, mayors and business men from the park section.

Pointing out that officials of the national park service estimate that within a few years the park will be drawing more than 1,000,000 tourists annually, Governor Gardner enumerated some of the advantages the influx of tourists will bring to the state.

Means $50,000,000.

"The entire population of North Carolina," he said "is three million people. Can you conceive what it will mean to have one visitor for every three persons in North Carolina and to have all these visitors concentrate in the main in this part of the state? If the average expenditure per person should amount to $50, the annual harvest of the tourist crop would be more than $50,000,000."

"This would set the value of the tourist crop at twice the present value of our cotton crop and it would be gathered without the back-breaking toil of picking and would not require the deduction of half of its value to pay the fertilizer bill."

Governor Gardner asserted western North Carolina would not be the only section of the state to profit from the park.

"North Carolina will benefit from mountains to seacoast," he said, "and east Tennessee will profit almost as much as North Carolina."

He asserted the problems presented were "how to let the world know about the beauties, the charm, the appeal, the allure of this great region; how to advertise the attractive and delightful ways of entering this area through North Carolina; how to get North Carolina and this region in particular ready for the great change in this section which the park is going to bring about."

The governor appealed for concerted action and elimination of petty jealousies in facing the undertaking and added in conclusion: "Most especially do I urge upon you tonight a unity of purpose and a zeal of leadership that will catch and capitalize for all of western North Carolina the opportunities that can come to it chiefly through the broadest and soundest advertising of this section of the state through advertising the park to the nation. Through this lies more hope of a return to prosperity than through any other course."

Finds Other Things Objectionable Here

To Editor of The Star:

The best one yet, the court house full, the county home full, the jail top heavy, and note that they are considering up at the court house taking over the old No. 6 chain-gang camp for our 30 day bootleggers and of course that will call for a few more two year pay boys.

You taxpayers, voters and citizens, get up a club and go see our representative and see if he thinks there will be any chance to get an act of the legislature to get our board bill reduced at the jail, any way the $1.00 or $1.50 turn-key fine to break in and get out as the bootlegger calls it. I do not see any relief coming from the court house as yet, which from the way things look will take a more drastic act from our representative, whom I learn will go to the court house for information and have most any law passed that our manager wishes. Lets take the advice of one of our leaders, whom I think spoke a parable if he can still stick to same, which I believe the taxpayers in No. 6 can vouch for as being very expensive and as O. M. Mull stated in publication of the Star, January 18, 1929, "Abolish Chain Gang for Economy." We have got rid of the chain gang, let's stay rid of anything that looks like one if possible.
