NOT ALONE

She is ready now to go.
Life, since you will have it so:
All the things she meant to do,
All the tricks her body knew,
All the subtleties of brain
She need never use again.
These are arts, these once were dear
She leaves them now without a tear.

It is time; her soul has rent
The detaining ligament;
Delight, desire, ambition, sleep,
None of these she cares to keep;
None regrets, naked and free
She goes . . . and life goes with her—
Not unaccompanied leaves her shell
All is well—All is well.
—Ellen Glines.
