TWINKLES

After today—one more big day and night of the fair, perhaps the biggest of all!

It isn't such a cheerful thing to talk about, but after this week the names of delinquent 1930 taxpayers are to be published.

A Washington dispatch informs that Hoover has defied "Big Navy Men," and the office boy asks if it isn't the first time he has defied any of the Big Interests.

Add to the similes of the season: As unusual as a college football star failing to pass his second-chance examinations.

"Borah," informs a headline, "Says Silver Is Key To Prosperity." You're right, senator; absolutely right. Enough silver in everybody's pocket should be the key to turn the trick.

Governor Gardner says there are three classes it doesn't pay to get in an argument with—women, preachers and newspapers. We wonder if North Carolina's First Lady noticed that he placed women first in the list?

All the talk about commercialized athletics in college results from the fact that a great many old grads would rather see their alma mater win on the gridiron than turn thumbs down on the fleet halfback who asks a little help.

SHOWING THEIR CLASS

CONGRATULATIONS ARE in order to the teachers and pupils of the Polkville school for the winning of first honors in the school booth contest at the county fair. As the veteran scribe and teacher, "Corn Cracker," has said heretofore, they "just have a habit of doing things up right about Polkville." Fallston and Waco are also due praise for their exceptional booths. It was the first time ever that all the schools had booths and such enterprise can but redound to the interests of school activities generally in the county.

Mention should be given also to the successful handling of the first county-wide track meet. Kings Mountain and Mooresboro boys ran away with the honors, but all the competing teams presented athletes of ability. By another year the track meet at the fair will be one of the outstanding events. Seeing their star sprinters and jumpers in action is just as thrilling to thousands of Cleveland youngsters as is a big football game to the college students.

BETTER POULTRY

THE FUTURE of the poultry industry in Cleveland county gets brighter and brighter. This year near 1,500 chickens were entered in the poultry department of the county fair. But that's not the main point; the quality of the birds entered was far better than ever before. So declared Rev. J. W. Suttle, veteran poultryman, and manager of the poultry show. Several years ago a number of Cleveland county farmers began to go at the poultry business in a serious, business-like manner. Theretofore the majority of the chicken flocks in the county were haphazard affairs, just enough chickens, with quality overlooked, for a few friers at the right time of year, enough eggs to eat and a few to sell now and then. Today any number of Cleveland county farmers consider their poultry flock their most dependable cash crop. The improved quality of the birds at the fair this year reveals the trend to better poultry, and recent sales, by the county poultry association, of pedigreed cockerels indicates that an even better quality of poultry and better yields are ahead.

And, isn't there just as much wisdom in securing good birds for the poultry flock as in getting the best seed for the cotton crop?

SCHOOL MAN TALKS SENSE

WHEN J. H. GENTRY, superintendent of schools in Iredell county, told the Statesville Rotary club that the State support of schools should be given a fair trial before being accorded criticism he, says The Statesville Daily, "exhibited a spirit worthy of commendation and emulations." Correct.

In quoting Mr. Gentry and commenting upon his remarks, the Statesville editor said:

Mr. Gentry put his finger on the basic cause of all criticism of State school operation when he said that the general idea had been that the State would furnish the money for the schools and leave the spending to local management. Instead, the State is saying, as was to be expected, where the money is to be spent and how much. There will be some embarrassments, some dissatisfaction because of changes that many be objectionable to localities, which the county school board will be unable to remedy because the final word is with the State. It is well in this connection to consider the alternative. If we would absolutely control the schools we can return to the system of local taxation for their support. The idea that the State will collect the money for the school and leave it to the unsupervised spending of local officials, directed by county policy which may be more considerate of community opinion, is out of the question.

Declaring that he was willing to undergo a good deal of supervision and endure many restrictions if the new arrangement will help us out of our present financial difficulties, Mr. Gentry is setting an example for all interested in the schools.

Remember also when we talk about the State doing this and that, that the State isn't the governor or the State superintendent or any State official. The operation of the schools is the result of legislative action. The legislature made the laws under which the schools are operated and cut the allowance for schools, which enforces the economy.

Isn't the view expressed by Prof. Gentry and concurred in by The Daily, the just way in which to size up the situation. We desired State support of schools and asked for it. We also sought lower school taxes. The State is attempting to give us what we asked for, but it stands to reason that we cannot have more economy, and as a result, lower taxes without less expenditure. It is an old, old saying that one cannot have his cake and eat it. We cannot cut down expenses without curtailing the spending. The last legislature was told and told again that the school tax burden was too heavy. A cut has been made, or is being made. Certainly, we should not yell this early in the game because we have no cake to eat when we howled just a short time ago, and will howl again, that we could not afford to buy it.

SO, STYLE DID IT ALL?

WHY ARE TIMES so hard? Why is it that the cotton farmer hardly gets enough for his cotton to pay for the picking and the wheat and grain farmer does not get enough to pay for the threshing?

Can it be that Style caused it all? Is it possible that the decree of fashion had much to do with starting the depression? Anyway that's the slant taken by a well known home economic expert.

The rage among women for slender figures sent grain prices tumbling, she says and explains with this statement: "When women started reducing their first move was to cut down on cereals." That decreased the consumption of gain. As a result, too, she points out many girls have starved themselves into hospitals and infirmaries with the hope of getting thin. And cotton flopped, according to similar advice offered by another expert, because Style decreed that milady should no longer wear cotton stockings and petticoats. At fall football games, it is pointed out, may be seen the young women, all dolled up in silk, shivering and teeth chattering because they do not have on enough clothes and have not eaten enough to withstand the weather.

That being the case, if it be the case—Let's have the style creators ordain that a girl—and the term girl covers all those who would be girls—isn't fashionable, not a bit of it! unless she is plump, even fat, and rosy-cheeked and all bundled up in clothing, mostly cotton clothing.

CAREFUL, MR. DANIELS

JOSEPHUS DANIELS, the Raleigh editor, can be depended upon to uphold the principles of prohibition at any time anyone desires to start a wet-dry jousting tilt. That must be admitted no matter how often or how vehemently you may differ with him on other topics—or even on that topic. At the same time he can be counted upon to express his mind about high leaders in the church taking too much time from religious matters to mingle in political discussions. But down at Warsaw this week we fear Mr. Daniels unintentionally came very near getting himself in a position where he could be entangled.

The occasion was that of the welcoming home by Warsaw of their home-town boy, Henry Stevens, who went away to the Legion convention and made good by being elected commander of all the World War veterans in America. Mr. Daniels was one of the speakers in the "welcome home" party. Among other things he is quoted in his own newspaper as saying was the following: "The Legion is the greatest organization in the world." We're not questioning that statement, and very few will because the Legion is certainly made up of a mighty fine group of young men. But this same Legion convention, remember, voted for a referendum on prohibition at the same time it voted Henry Stevens in office. Some dry reformers who may not be fond of Mr. Daniels and not really as dry, for that matter, may take that opportunity of claiming Mr. Daniels is wet because he considers the Legion such a great organization.
