At The Theatres

One of the unusual things about the new picture at the Carolina today and Thursday is that husband and wife are playing opposite roles. Dorothy Sebastian brings real romance to the screen in "The Big Gamble," with William Boyd, her husband. Warner Oland, the third member of the party that makes the strangest bargain two men and a woman ever made. Zasu Pitts and Jimmy Gleason do the comedy in which the rolling pin proves mightier than an automatic.

The romantic John Gilbert is the central figure in today's feature offering at the Webb theatre, in "The Phantom of Paris." Lewis Stone and Leila Hyams are other important members of the cast that speak for screen entertainment of the first order. Added to the bill, are Selected Short Subjects, News reel and acts. Friday's change of program will feature Jack Holt in "50 Fathoms Deep."

EDITOR DEFENDS SCIENTIFIC AGE

Says Applied Science Becoming The Pilot Of Industry.

LaFayette, Ind.—Industrial leaders from five states are gathered at Purdue University for a two-day study of the coordination to progress, science and education to promote human welfare and mitigate depressions.

The opening theme is converting the unemployment now charged in part to machines into means of increase of comfort, leisure and culture for every one.

About 250 industrialists, scientists and college professors attended the opening dinner tonight. The conference was held under auspices of the Purdue Research Foundation.

Harrison E. Howe, of Washington, editor of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, said science is becoming the "pilot of industry."

"Some critics lose sight of the new industries which have been created through applied science. It is unfair to censure science for the over-emphasis of mass production and leave untouched our obvious failure to give proper consideration to the balancing of consumer demand and of distribution against the production which science had helped to make possible.

"We are told that in China the labor of 5 out of every 100 is required to produce the meager existence experienced by the majority of that populous country. In the United States 15 American workers produce the necessities for 100, giving ample opportunity for a life of greater ease and for leisure which properly applied leads to culture.

"If our sociologists and humanitarians have not been able to keep pace with science, so that we do not yet know how best to employ our leisure, that too cannot be charged to any failure on the part of science.

"Give us another industry like motion pictures, the radio, electrical refrigeration, automobiles, oil burners and so many thousands of new jobs would be created as not only to affect unemployment but to be potent in again starting us on the upgrade."
