New Evidence Found In Trunk Murder Affair

Indicates Possibility That Woman Had Accomplice In "Trunk Murders" of Couple.

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 29.—New evidence intended to contradict the story of Winnie Ruth Judd and indicating that possibly she had an accomplice in the slaying of Miss Hedvig Samuelson and Mrs. Agnes Le Roi here two weeks ago was being rounded up by Phoenix authorities today.

Mrs. Judd stated she shot both women the morning of October 17 as the climax of a quarrel over social affairs. She admitted placing the bodies in trunks and sending them to Los Angeles.

Neighbors of the two slain women said that late the night of October 16 "a large black sedan" entered the driveway of the Le Roi-Samuelson home.

Phoenix authorities were endeavoring to trace the ownership of this car and to learn whether it contained Mrs. Judd or some friend of the slain women, or perhaps an accomplice in the killings.

Meanwhile the extradition fight and future defense of Mrs. Judd rested with Paul Schenck, veteran Los Angeles attorney.

Schenck was retained last night by Dr. William C. Judd, husband of the slayer, to supplement other defense counsel.

Presbyterians Set Budget For Missions

Asheville, Oct. 29.—Having approved a budget appropriating $3,915,000 for support of its work during the fiscal year starting April 1, 1932, the National Board of Missions of the Presbyterian church in America today had before it reports of committees and a final business session.

Fifty-eight members of the board from all parts of America are in attendance.

Forced Labor In Russia

There is forced labor in Russia—plenty of it. So declares Henry Raymond Mussey writing from Stalingrad in The Nation of November 4. "I have seen it myself in Moscow, with officials, contrary to the tradition of their craft, working like slaves at their desks all day and spending all night in conferences and meetings. I have seen it in factories, where union groups and shop committees are getting together after working hours and demanding savagely of one another why they are not meeting the impossibilities of the Five-Year Plan in four, or in two and a half."

"I have seen it in the construction of the great new automobile works at Nizhny-Novgorod among the American engineers supervising the whole gigantic undertaking. They started seventeen months ago literally with nothing but a swamp, with no materials, no equipment, no labor, nothing but endless resourcefulness and iron determination; today they are racing down the stretch, with 30,000 construction workers behind them, hoping to hit the tape before the red November days. I do not mean that everybody in the country is working furiously, for of course that is not true, but many men in all walks of life are, and no one watching them can doubt that there is forced labor in Russia."

"If anybody wants to pick up a bargain in forced labor, however, or any other kind of labor," continues Mr. Mussey, "I should advise him not to look for it in Russia just now for it is certainly a seller's market in labor if ever there was one. Everywhere I have been there is going up a tremendous call for more labor: scientists, technicians, organizers, managers, accountants, clerks, typists, mechanics of every degree of skill and lack of it, construction workers (millions of them, I should think), unskilled laborers. Each task done only cries for more work to be done."

"What Russia's industrial leaders are doing," concludes Mr. Mussey, "is to drive men from behind, not with the whip and bayonet, as is so often alleged, or even with the fear of starvation, as is frankly the case under our scheme, but with the lash of a frightfully effective public opinion; and to lure them from ahead with the familiar means of better immediate pay for better work, and, more significantly, I believe, with the hope of a better future for all the people through the workers' contribution to a common enlarged production. How far they are going to succeed I do not know. I do know that the results already achieved, under conditions incredibly difficult, are astounding even to the casual observer, if he have the slightest knowledge of economic and social history and theory."

If you have any difficulty in capturing the attention of your audience pay her a nice compliment in a low voice and see her lean forward at once.
