Gardner, Daniels Speak From Same Platform In N. C.

Governor Stresses Food Crops, Daniels Rides "Privileges" Opposing Views.

(Tom Bost in Greensboro News.) Faison, Nov. 9.—Duplin county farmers, giving thanks Friday afternoon for the full trees of the Lord, saw Josephus Daniels pick up their dogology like a fumbled football, and run straight for the goal—the governorship of North Carolina. Whether the Duplinians saw straight or Mr. Daniels talked crooked time must be left to tell. The Raleigh editor walking into the teeth of a northwest wind, declared his purpose to "clarify the situation." And then for 20 minutes or more this lord of limbo gave governments, state and federal, pluperfect hell. What situation he meant to clarify, what thanks he wished to bestow, he left to the 3,000 shivering whites and blacks to imagine. But whether they were white or black, bond or free, Jew or gentile, Sythian or barbarian, the speech had just one meaning—"I am a candidate for governor of North Carolina." Gathered To Give Thanks. To be sure, the original purpose of the high harvesters was to give thanks, but it is not the first time that efforts to glorify God have been turned to the account of men. Mr. Daniels himself was not without both reverence and gratitude. He was thankful for the plenty, for the peas, the persimmons, the pickles, the pigs and the punkins, blessings of a brooding providence. He had undisguised contempt for public men and the "smoothies" who look complacently on as privilege plunders the land. If this scribbling scavenger were asked to interpret the Daniels diatribe against the governments and their agents, without the slightest hesitation it would be set down and certified to all the generations that Mr. Daniels' speech was not a commitment of candidacy but a definite and everlasting renunciation of any hope to be elected to a state office. In this view there is no company. The crowd took the assault as a categorical purpose to give battle to all the apologists of privilege and favoritism. The assembly was full of political aspirants and public office holders. Without a dissent they accepted the pronouncement as a declaration of war in which the editor was to be the commander in chief. It was so interpreted by Governor Gardner, by Secretary Jim Hartness, Stacy Wade, his opponent, Charles Abernethy, third district congressman, Dr. F. Giles, candidate for lieutenant governor, Fred Parker, of the Wayne county delegation in the general assembly, and by numerous reporters who looked upon the raging white face of Mr. Daniels and heard him low rate everything in state and national public life. Time after time as the Raleigh editor pranced before Governor Gardner and gesticulated as though he might hop on his excellency, a single cry from the audience would be heard: "We want you for governor." To say that the crowd would have nominated him would be as far out of place as the speech itself. But malcontents never heard doctrine more to their taste. Faison has Republicans. It is related by blood and marriage to the great Marlon Butler, in his day the cleverest assailant of the North Carolina Democracy. Mr. Butler appeared to have something on Mr. Daniels in the richness of vocabulary. The Sampsonians called them hotel walls. Mr. Daniel is more names that never were written on velvet. To him they are "smooth-easies," first cousin, perhaps to speakasies. Started As Thanksgivng. But it was a thanksgiving occasion nevertheless. A good deal of thanking was done before Mr. Daniels had his chance. The townspeople were assembled at the railroad station and there on the ware house platform the Duplin harvesters were displayed. There was deep black on cotton and tobacco, there was a pile of pumpkins, walnuts, corn, potatoes, sorghum, pickles, peas and persimmons, plenary and overwhelming evidence that Cornucopia had emptied the pockets of her pantalettes on the people of this county. Mayor Faison gave the keys to Governor Gardner and Senator Johnson presented Mrs. Marshall Williams Faison's most gifted citizen. The artist assured the people that Duplin is a safe place to visit, and that there is "no danger of getting lost here." Mr. Johnson then presented Governor Gardner as the state's contributed to the nation and a "godsend to North Carolina today."

But Senator Johnson had not heard Mr. Daniels speak, else, if the senator stuck to it that Gardner was godsent his excellency must have been devel-brought. The governor fancied what would have been the history of the world, if Gardner for instance, had decreed in the olden years that her boys should have spent three years in the open air and the fields of Germany for instance, had decreed years in learning of poison gas and deadly arms. The governor made the Duplin people gasp with his knowledge of their county. He told them how they had decreased their cotton acreage in five years by more than 8,000, but how in the same period they had raised their 17,000 tobacco acres to 23,000. They had carried their peanuts from 1,000 to 13,000 acres and they are a rare people in that they have 25,000 hogs for their 35,000 population. He expanded his statement to embrace the whole state. So long as he spoke of food Mr. Daniels appeared to be with him, but when his excellency made his live at home gospel a missionary in the field of taxation the Raleigh editor saw his text getting away. This live at home program had saved money for North Carolina which could be put into the payment of taxes. Mr. Gardner said. Hitherto, these food crops outside the state have been taking their tribute of North Carolina and the farmers in other commonwealths have paid their taxes with North Carolina gold. Daniels Clarifies. Senator Johnson introduced Mr. Daniels, who stepped gingerly to the platform as a rooster yelped "the next governor of North Carolina." It was difficult in the bizzard and noise to catch his words but he announced that he would clarify the situation which was so serious and fraught with so much interest. There are two things which should be considered today, he said. "For 10 years we have been believing in fairies and hants." He referred to the speculation and gambling during these 10 years and said that by some magic we hoped they would bring prosperity. Instead of investing in essential industry, the tendency had been to spend in these gambling schemes and "by legislation favoritism in government, state and nation," privilege and favoritism had established themselves. Four fifths of the wealth of the country is in the hands of one tenth of the population. "Why is it that the profits of labor have been given to the few?" he asked. Crack At "Cycles" Theology. "The God of the universe does not send cycles of depression," Mr. Daniels said, rebutting the theory that every few years there are hard times. He was willing to thank God for good crops, but not for bad legislations.

Disturbance In Brain a Cause of Stomach Ills?

Authority Offers a New Theory in the Cause of Gastric Ulcers, Believing That a Brain Irritation May Be Responsible for Their Formation

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D. United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City. ONE of the most common diseases of mankind is gastric ulcer. Apparently this disease has increased as a result of our modern methods of living. In the recent published statement, an eminent brain surgeon states that stomach ulcers are caused by a disturbance in a certain portion of the brain. He believes that the "diencephalon," the part of the brain that controls our emotions, has much to do with the stomach. He considers it probably that irritation here may be directly responsible for the formation of gastric ulcers. This announcement is of great interest. This is particularly true because of the fact that many theories have been advanced as to the cause of this disease. One theory, these have been abandoned. Ulcer of the stomach, which is the same as "gastric ulcer," or as the doctors call it, "peptic ulcer," has been recognized for many centuries. For years it was believed the disease was due to a blocking of the blood vessels supplying a portion of the stomach. Under these

Pneumonia May Result From Neglected Colds

United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City. NEVER a year passes but many of our most notable and distinguished citizens are snatched away by pneumonia. For many centuries this disease has been the terror of all mankind. It afflicts the poor, the rich, the young and the old. When once certain types of the disease have been firmly entrenched, there is little hope of recovery. It is really a shame how extremely negligent most persons are in regard to colds and coughs. This negligence permits a mild infection to travel to the lungs. Then the way is prepared for the germs of pneumonia to enter the tissues and there to begin their deadly work. Persons who are extremely tired, undernourished and exposed to common colds and similar infections, are the individuals who are likely to succumb to pneumonia. The most important thing in the treatment of pneumonia is to give good care and nursing. For this reason it is wise, if possible, to remove the pneumonia patient to a hospital. There all desirable facilities are available. Such advantages cannot be obtained, even in the best of homes. There is a stage in the disease where it is extremely difficult to breathe. This difficulty is due to the closing of the air cells. If the patient can be carried over this dangerous period he will probably recover. To effect this it may be necessary to administer a stimulating gas. You can readily see that this treatment can be given at home only with the greatest of difficulty. It is hoped that eventually a dependable remedy for pneumonia will be discovered. A great amount of research is being done in developing a serum which may prevent or even cure this terrible disease. Mighty Monster Of The Deep Will Visit Shelby Next Week

Pictured above are the massive jaws of Colossus, Pacific Whaling Co's mammoth whale, which will be shown here next Wednesday and Thursday at the Southern Railway tracks at West Warren street. The whale which measures 55 feet in length and is 68 tons is one of the greatest educational exhibitions of all time. Little Pearl White, of Long Beach, Calif., is shown posed on the whale's lower jaw. The picture gives an idea of the enormous size of the denizen of the deep. Accompanying the exhibit are Captains Harry White and William N. Smith, who lecture at short intervals. The exhibit will be open from the time it arrives Wednesday morning, until it leaves late Thursday night.
