SYRIAN PRINCESS

Three Engagements For Syrian Princess

Princess From Palestine Will Give Readings, Lectures And Pictures On Orient.

"Palestine is the most beautiful country in the world, but America is the most wonderful; indeed, more than a land of liberty it is a land of opportunity," is the opinion of the Princess Rahme Haidar, eminent Oriental author and lecturer who is to visit Shelby and while here will present three of her most noted recitals, using her home, the Holy Land, as a setting for all. Like a gentle cooling breeze, wafted from the mystic romance lands of the old world, comes this daughter of an old Syrian house, with a direct lineal descent reaching back into the impenetrable mists of antiquity, even to the days of the Arab tribe of Beni-Ghassan, who were in power from 85 B. C. to 600 A. D. Princess Rahme is touring this country on an educational mission, bringing to the people of this western world a better understanding of that little land from whence came our Bible and our modern ideas of civilization.

Princess Rahme has a splendid education, both in American colleges in her native Syria and in universities in this country and has become an outstanding figure upon the American lecture platform as an authority on Palestinian life. Her first appearance in our city will be on Sunday night, Nov. 15 at the First Baptist church at 7:30 o'clock when she presents her famous costume-recital "Under Syrian Stars," painting a modern as well as ancient picture of life in the Holy Land.

On Monday at the high school at 8 her last appearance in Shelby she will show her own recent authentic moving pictures of Palestine, "Gems of the East" and will also give one scene from her drama, "Ruth and Naomi." She will also show her pictures Tuesday night at 8 in the South Shelby school.

This charming and cultured daughter of the far east will wear her own robes of native silks, hand embroidered by girls of Damascus and will be ably assisted by her co-worker, Miss Lucille Burgess, who will furnish the musical setting for all of the princess' programs.
