

The Last Weaver

Durham—The name Weaver, is now, and always has been, prominent in the North Carolina sports world. Jim, the oldest, starred at Centenary and Duke and is now coach of football and basketball at Oak Ridge military institute. Stacy, next, was an outstanding athlete at Duke, and at present is coaching basketball and baseball at Rutherford junior college. Charles, Jr., was a three-letter man at Duke, and coached at the Methodist orphanage at Raleigh before going into business in New York. And now, Phil, the last of the lot, is starring as the Blue Devil basketball team gets ready to open the season and appears to have one of the guard posts "in a bag." Their father, Rev. C. C. Weaver is pastor of the Centenary Methodist church in Winston-Salem, and a former president of Emory and Henry college and of Davenport college.

At The Theatres

The Carolina is playing "Are These Our Children" today and Tuesday. It is a much-discussed and honest treatment of the youth of today, marching stridently and boldly to the dance of life—uncaring where the strains may lead them. A half dozen young actors have conspired to make the film one of intense realism based on the rebellious conduct of modern youth. "Are These Our Children?" is a picture ever parent would like to see. Most of the brilliant cast are people in their 'teens of the high school age.
 "Flying High" is the title of the Webb's picture for today and tomorrow. It is an adaptation of the George White musical comedy success. Bert Lohr, America's most imitated comedian and star of the original Broadway hit, heads the cast in the new talkie version. The picture also features Charlotte Greenwood, comedienne, who last played with Eddie Cantor in "Palmy Days." Charles Chaplin comes to the Webb Wednesday in "City Lights."
 The new eastern Carolina creamery at Washington is still growing with new producers bringing in cream each week.
