Right To Work In America Not In Constitution

Would Have Government Insure Against Unemployment as Against Old Age.

Washington—What's all this talk about the "right to work" that you hear so much about?

If people have any such right it appears that about 7,000,000 of them are being cheated—deprived, that is, of the right. And yet there appears to be an overwhelming preponderance of opinion that each human being is born with such a right.

Diligent research fails to discover the recognition of any such right in the Constitution, in the acts of congress or in the old common law. Federal Judge Wilkerson of Chicago, 10 years ago laid down from the bench the dictum that "The right to work is not an absolute right," as he granted a labor injunction.

That little crack of Wilkerson's, however, is one of the things that will be used against him when progressive members of the senate try to prevent confirmation of his promotion to the federal circuit court of appeals. They contend that, although the law books do not mention it, there is an absolute moral right to work which no one dares dispute. Their theory is that when society denies a man the right to work—or a chance to work—it is, in effect, sentencing him to death by starvation or to a life of crime.

But probably the first attempt to make a legal provision of "the right to work" is advanced by Congressman David John Lewis of Maryland, who was working in the coal mines at the age of nine and is now recognized as one of the most able members of the house. Lewis has introduced a bill for a national system based on the Gerard Swope plan for employment stabilization backed by results of the congressional studies in this country and Europe. He points out that whereas the Swope program would confer such benefits as old age pensions, life and disability insurance and unemployment insurance on workers already employed, it is also necessary to provide for the unemployed.

Lewis proposes a semi-compulsory equal division of employment. "The right to work is as indisputable as the rights of property," Lewis says, "but it is ineffective because it has not yet been clothed with the same legal sanctions as property. So this fight, the most primeval of rights, will not insure the worker a loaf of bread tomorrow, or his wife and children against eviction. The section of my bill undertaking to provide such legal sanctions says

Plan Outlined.

"It is hereby declared as a principle of social justice that (a) the citizen possesses a right to work and is entitled to the protection of the laws in asserting such right and in demanding an equal share of the employment available in the trade; and (b) it is also declared to be the duty of the trade association concerned to provide him with an equal share of the employment available for which he is competent; and in default thereof to render him just compensation in lieu thereof."

The Lewis bill embodies Swope's idea of national trade associations and supervision by the Federal trade commission giving equal representation—three members to employers, three to employees and three to the consuming public—on the trade association managing boards. The board, furthermore, would determine monthly the gross hours of employment available in the coming month, then divide that by the employees having jobs plus the registered craftsmen out of work, arriving at a monthly employment quota per worker; he employer who works anyone in excess would pay an excise tax equal to half the wages of the overtime involved, to go into the unemployment compensation fund. Disemployed workers would be able to sue the trade association when they failed to obtain their quotas of employment.

Objects To Shelby Selling City Plant

To The Editor:

Selling our city light plant to the S. P. U., particularly at this time, seems to be unwise, and from the way I hear the people talking three to one hold the same opinion.

How many men would sell their homes or their land just now at the prices they could get? Not a one unless he had to. No property is bringing what it should now. Every man who has a house he can get $3,000 for today is sure that that same house will be worth $4,500 or $5,000 when money matters and values get adjusted. Am I not right? And if our light plant is worth a million and one hundred thousand dollars now, what will it be worth four or five years from now? Enough, judging by the way it has increased in value, to pay all our debts and leave over enough money to build school buildings or anything else needed then.

When we have it as we have it now, where he can say how it shall be run because we elect the people who run it, why sell it to someone we cannot elect or put out of office? If it is sold and the rate should not be quite so nice as some think, what would or could we do about it, except howl? And what good would the howling do? We could, of course, have our light and power cut off, but we'd just be cutting off our nose to spite our face. Not many of us, although we'd talk big, would be willing to do without electric lights and burn kerosene lamps again. Even if a few of us would, it wouldn't break the S. P. U. They'd look for us back sooner or later and get us. What of the other towns where they have S. P. U.? Our officials visited there, but didn't let out a whisper about what they found out when they came back. Right in Shelby is an electric dealer selling electrical appliances discarded by citizens in a town visited by Shelby officials because the citizens there took them out because they could not stand the S. P. U. rate. If a man is going to buy a certain kind of automobile and he is a sensible man, doesn't he go ask someone who has a car of that make how his car is standing up? If we're thinking of S. P. U. service, then why not hear something from those who tried it? It may sound good on paper, but how does it work out? An automobile may look good in a show window and in a picture, but how will it run, how much gas will it burn, and how will it stand up? The wise man does not buy things on the pretty spiel put up by the man selling. He investigates for himself and finds out how others like it. And when we're selling we should do the same thing. The

S. P. U. spiel about rates and taxes may sound good now, but what about later when they turn around and tax every house, the houses of the poor, to pay the S. P. U. for our street lights? Ask Blacksburg how much they have to dig up out of taxes to pay for getting their street lights? Are Hickory people satisfied with S. P. U. rates? Why are Charlotte people, right where the S. P. U. office is located, writing letters to the paper every day protesting about their light bills? They're even trying to get somebody to run for legislature who will try to help them get their lights at a lower cost. Ask close-by Shelby people—the people who live out at Cleveland Springs on an S. P. U. line. See what they have to say.

They have the report out that it will help the little man. Yeah! Maybe it will, but are the main fellows going about working for the same little men? And are they arguing for it just to help the poor man? If you think so, go ahead and help sell it, but think twice.

Hereafter, says Lieutenant L. R. Fisher, all traffic will use the outside lanes except in passing other cars.

Heretofore the two outside lanes were used by slow traffic and the two inside lanes by fast traffic. The result was a dangerous situation when, in the fast lane, a car came up from behind and, attempting to pass another car in that lane, was forced over into the fast lane of cars going in the opposite direction.

The highway has been properly marked so that no confusion is expected to result from the change, he said. He also called attention to the fact that the same 45-mile speed limit obtains on the Wilkinson boulevard as on other highways.

Instructions were in the nature of state-wide regulations, he said, but it so happened that no other highway in the state has the necessary width for such a traffic arrangement. He was hopeful that the high percentage of accidents on that road will be reduced.

Determined to stand behind his sister in the ordeal she will have to face in fighting the murder charge against her and the three naval men, charged with slaying Joseph Kahahawai, Robert Bell brother of Mrs. Granville Fortescue, is shown as he sailed from Los Angeles for Honolulu. The four accused of killing the Hawaiian are held on board the U. S. S. Alton as a protection against possible mob violence.
