Hard Times, Heck: You Should Have Lived In The Good Old Days

Fisher Folk Remember When Conditions Were Considerably Worse.

Stump Point.—It's been many years since conditions at Stumpy Point were symbolical of its name but this year, in the face of adverse circumstances, inhabitants of its 80 homes are still optimistic. This far-famed fishing community was once the most prosperous in the section but fishing has been not so good this year and automobiles here, averaging more than one to a home, are jacked up in garages where they will stay until the fishing industry mends.

The residents say they've decided to "keep our credit good at the prices of pleasure. We lived for many years and prospered exceedingly and we can do it again." A. S. Hooper, one of the best known residents of the village says "Folks talk a lot about hard times but they don't know as much about them as I do."

The 70-odd year old man said "I've seen times worse than these. I know when my grandfather ran a grist mill at Rodanthe and a man walked 18 miles up the beach bringing a big oar to be ground in order to get bread for his family."

"I know when my father here for months and months had not a cent of money, yet by dint of fortitude and hard work supported a family of 13 and never complained. There are always fish or fowl here and we can raise gardens."

Daniel B. Midget, likewise in his 70's, says there is no need to worry about conditions. For years he has cultivated a few fertile acres, "tended many hives of bees, reared a family, saved money and owes no man anything." He says the trouble is that "folks do not want to work."

Ideal Man Listed By College Paper

Chapel Hill.—The Daily Tar Heel student newspaper at the University of North Carolina, has taken a poll of girls on 17 college campuses to find what traits and qualifications are demanded of the "ideal man," and oddly enough, two of the requisites listed were "bigness and ugliness." The composite "ideal" it was found, would live up to his name "He must not wear a moustache. Whether he is a blonde or brunette does not matter. He must have a sense of humor, dress neatly, be a 'happy medium' between the 'cut-college-boy type and the serious-minded student, possess a fairly high social standing and 'reasonable' finances, be a good conversationalist without 'stringing lines' be a good dancer, be congenial, honest, broad-minded, economical, ambitious, kind, attentive, considerate, energetic, and generous," to mention only a few of the desirable qualities.

Change Food Habits Aids Dairy Farming

Less Meats and More Milk, Butter And Cheese Being Consumed By People

The change in diet of the American people during the past 80 years to where more fruit, vegetables and dairy are consumed is causing a shift in production to meet these new demands and is especially having an effect on the dairy industry. A. C. Kimrey, dairy extension specialist at State College, has been digging into these recently and reports a phenomenal shift to milk, butter and cheese during the last two decades. At the same time there has been a decline in the demand for meats. This increasing desire for dairy products, however, is having its effects in the keeping of more and better dairy cattle and is further resulting in the supply of meat to come as a by-product of the dairy industry.

In other words, the veal calves and unprofitable milk cows are sold by dairymen for beef purposes and when these cows especially are properly fattened, they furnish a nutritious and palatable meat at a comparatively low price. This is because the meat is coming as a by-product of the dairy industry and not as the main purpose of the industry. Mr. Kimrey also makes the point that the milk cow is the most economical of human food known in the animal kingdom. She can convert a 100 pounds of feed into more pounds of human food than any other class of domestic livestock. This food is composed of milk, butter and meat. A good example, says Kimrey, is cheese. One gallon of 5 percent milk will make one pound of cheese comparable with a pound of meat in food value and requires much less feed to produce. "As the population of this country increases and the land for each person decreases, the dairy cow and her product will supply a larger per cent of our food than she now does," says Mr. Kimrey.

52 Members Assembly To Seek Office Again

Raleigh.—Fifty-two members of the 1931 house of representatives have announced their candidacies to succeed themselves in the 1932 general assembly and 31 have said they will not run, Thad Eure, principal clerk of the house, says. The intentions of 36 members, some of whom will doubtless be candidates, are not known, Eure said. LeRoy Martin, principal clerk of the state senate, yesterday said only 10 of the 50 members of the 1931 senate had so far decided to run for re-election. There are 120 house members.
