In describing Hoey, Blythe wrote: " . . . fogmer congressman, tail, stoop-shouldered, long-haired, also cutaway, whose eyes flash fire in the cause of democracy at meetings all over the nation and whose lips exude oratory as naturally and as habitually as a Neapolitan's exude odors of garlic . . . . And of Solicitor Carpenter he said:

What would we sure enough-we're asking you and you?

The original question was not asked by this colyum, merely repeatrmly congratulated following his ed. The query appeared on page one of The Shelby Banner on Saturday, July 1, 1876. But it is just as difficult to answer today as it was Dr. Wall practises what he preach- then, and will be equally as difficult 50 years hence.

Seven persons out of ten could not "make" conversation without reference to the weather. Check-up and see the next time you drop in a Shelby drug store for a dope.

Anyway, here's what the writer in the Shelby Banner of more than half century ago said:

"If we didn't talk about the weather, what would become of bashful people, and people without an idea in their heads, and people whose ideas are like rubbish in an old garret-hard to get at? . . . And what would become of young people recently introduced to each other and dying to make a favorable impression? . . . . It comes just as handy to us to tell our friends when we meet them that it is a cold, or a warm day, or a fine day, as it does to say good morning-and everybody expects it . . . . . Everybody talks about the weather. Idiots and wise men are equally interested. Profane and Godly, poor relations, and politicians, lovers, and people in all their senses 'make talk' about the weather."

The Shelby writer of 1876 was not far wrong. This corner finding itself perplexed about a topic of chatter today turns to the weather-

IS STILL "CAM"

Since this is an around-about line of tattle today it is likely to hop during the World war would "go on any topic:

Tother night scores of Shelby and Cleveland county people dialed many of them will "go down the their radio around to station WBT to hear Senator Cameron Morrison line" with him in the present camin his address at Charlotte.

While Senator Morrison has been in Washington at least two of his opponents, Bob Reynolds and Frank Grist, have been travelling Resolution Adopted about the state talking of "the rich man" they oppose. The senator, yknow, married a bit of money-a sizeable bit. But, Senator Morrison a few weeks back from Washington announced that he would not come home to make campaign talks to catch votes but, instead, would come home and discuss vital issues of the day-the tariff, the reconstruction farm loan fund of the reconstrucpolicy, the sales tax, etc.

But when he got back he reverted, it seems, to type-became the old ly available was adopted today by red-shirt Cam all over again. About marrying his money, he said:

"God gave me a good, noble woman for my wife—and she does have $125,000,000 available for loans to money. Here's how we use it. From our farm she fights the devil through the Presbyterian thursh, and whatever money is left and I get the corporations debentures. hold of it I use to fight the devil through the Democratic party-and

I tell her we're fighting about the same thing." Since going to the senate Mr. Morrison may have made a few at State college this year during the blunders and talked at the wrong time or said the wrong thing, but week of August 29 to September 3. when he came back home to make his maiden 1932 speech remarks of The State Farmers convention and the type above brought it home to his supporters that he hadn't "going the State Federation of home demhigh-hat" in Washington. ### Millionaire Suicide Baby Is A Baby

According to the closest associates of George. Eastman (above), the suicide of the 77-year-old million-aire philanthropist, of Rochester, N. Y., was the climax of a long period of bed-ridden inaction, which irked the inventor to the point of desperation. Eastman, who rose from a $3-a-week errand boy to head of a $200,000,000 firm, is said to have given away approximately $100,000,000 in his lifetime.
