TWINKLES

A contemporary describes an ideal husband as one who never passes a mail box without feeling in his pocket for letters.

Shelby's first contested divorce suit ended in a mistrial, which may or may not tend to slow up the reputation the city is getting as a home-State Reno.

Gloria Swanson is the mother of another daughter. Now if she doesn't change husbands before the little miss gets well acquainted with her dad.

Shop talk, but why not? A Shelby firm made an announcement in Monday's Star of an event at the firm's place of business and in a period of two hours Wednesday over 800 people visited the exhibition.

The death list continues to add the names of men who played an important role in the upbuilding of Cleveland county, the latest being that of Val Thomasson, a man whose many friends bespeak the high regard in which he was held.

The cost of operating the schools of North Carolina has been cut four million dollars by the economy plan put in by the Gardner legislature, and that is an item with considerable pleasure attached for the average citizen who believed that it could be done by buckling down despite the few howls that are always to be anticipated in such matters.

The announcement that the three uptown churches of Shelby will unite in observance of two weeks of prayer during the year ahead heralds a spirit of cooperation and union deserving of commendation. The advance announcement serves the purpose, too, of eliminating what other activities might have been booked for the week, thus giving the church organizations the right-of-way for the week in November and again in February.

SENATOR CAM'S JOB

THE WORLD WAR VETERANS seem to have Senator Cameron Morrison in a right ticklish place. On one side Henry Stevens, national commander of the American Legion and a Tar Heel, expresses opposition to paying the veterans' bonus now, while on the other side many veterans and officials, including the full strength of the Shelby post, are ready to do battle for immediate payment of the bonus. It is a pretty good wager, however, Morrison supporters will tell you, that Senator Cam, experienced in diplomatic frankness, will manage to extricate himself with little injury to himself.

A BOOSTING OPPORTUNITY

IT IS DEFINITELY CERTAIN now that Chas. A. Jonas will not be confirmed as district attorney for this Federal court district. With the office vacant and an appointment to be made soon the opportunity is at hand for Cleveland county to lend what influence it may have in forwarding the appointment of a native son, Fred D. Hamrick, of Rutherfordton. The office will be filled by a Republican; there is no getting around that. Such being the case, why shouldn't the combined influence of this county, Democratic and Republican, go to a native son? His ability and legal training and experience fit him for the office. It is not an out-and-out partisan matter and the proper support should give the Rutherford attorney the appointment.

WIN PEOPLE'S RESPECT

IT'S DOLLARS to doughnuts that the Cleveland county commissioners have heard by now enough talk from the people to realize that they did themselves proud in slashing the salaries of county offices within their jurisdiction, and recommending, at the same time, that the incoming board make the reduction general.

Several of the candidates for county offices, men who hope to occupy the offices at the reduced salaries, have already given public expression to their approval of the move. That will not lose them any votes.

In fact, it is our opinion, after hearing the reaction from scores of citizens, that the present office-holders, the prospective office-holders and the entire Democratic organization stands considerably higher in the respect of the public and the June primary and the fall election will show it.

HE SHOULD BE HEARD

CLEVELAND COUNTY citizens will on Monday night have the opportunity of hearing one of North Carolina's most persuasive orators when John C. B. Ehringhaus, one of the three candidates for governor, makes his first formal campaign speech in the county. Some citizens may have already decided to vote for Mr. Ehringhaus or for one of his opponents, Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Fountain, but despite that it should be worthwhile to hear the Elizabeth City man. It is a year and a period in which voters are desirous of knowing more about the various candidates and what they stand for than has been the case in many years. For that reason it will pay all voters to hear the candidates express themselves at every opportunity. What's more, those who hear Mr. Ehringhaus, and many will, we believe, are not likely to be disappointed, because, there are few more eloquent and pleasing talkers in the State. He deserves a large and attentive audience, too, because of his long record of service to the party, no matter if some of those who attend prefer to support one of the other candidates.

THE FIGHT IS ON

THE GIANTS OF the motor world, as The Monroe Journal says, are grappling for the leadership. Not for the leadership in putting out and selling swanky, high-priced motors, but for the leadership in the low-price field.

Not so many years ago the big motor firms were vying with each other in making and boosting handsome high-priced automobiles. It is a different fight now, a battle appropriate to the times. The new models in the motor world, it should be said in fairness, are handsome, too, perhaps more handsome and at the same time more serviceable than ever before. But the makers have realized that there are far more people of moderate circumstances than there are wealthy people, particularly just now. As a result Ford, General Motors and Chrysler, giants all in the motor world, are making their big appeal to the pocketbook.

SHOULD BE OF VALUE

AFTER CONSIDERABLE work to get the movement properly sold, the Red Cross first-aid school is to be conducted in Shelby. In the opinion of The Star the school, to be held May 2-13, will be one of the most beneficial and worthwhile movements of the type ever put over in Shelby. Selected employees from textile mills and industrial plants, city firemen, Boy Scouts and others will take the course. Tell us not that it will not be of great benefit to have these people instructed in first-aid treatment and life-saving methods. After completing the course, given practically gratis by the Red Cross, the students will return to their respective plants and organizations and instruct their fellow workers in Red Cross methods. Thus the seriousness of many injuries and the death rate should be considerably reduced in the years to come. It is a matter of getting that important safety-first precaution at almost no cost.

EVEN MAKING GLASS PROFANE

CHECK ANOTHER up against the Hoover regime. Don Wharton, native North Carolina newspaperman, writing an article in Outlook on the veteran senator of Virginia, Carter Glass, has the following to say:

"Glass does not admit that he is getting old. He is still riled when anyone offers an arm on crossing a street. He is still full of energy. . . . The same old Glass. And yet there is one change. For a quarter of a century it was common knowledge that Glass never used a stronger word than his quaint 'dab-bum'. In the last three years, in the three years of Hoover, he has taken to saying 'damn'."

From "dad-bum"—or should it be "dad-gum"—in three years of a "full-dinner-pail prosperity." The Elizabeth City Advance adds: "And so, we fear, have many other people." Which, it seems, is comment enough for the reader to draw his own deductions.

PUNCH IN A CARTOON

AN EDITORIAL CARTOON appeared recently in one of the large newspapers of the East told its story with more punch than any cartoon we have seen recently.

The scene was that of a see-saw. All of you, young and old, know what a see-saw is. On one end of the plank, the end weighted to the ground, was a figure, a big hefty, overgrown figure, representing the cost of government. On the other end of the plank, high in the air, was an emaciated, lightweight figure representing income that should offset, balance or see-saw the governmental cost. The light figure, of course, was not pulling down the load. In the background was a figure, representing congress, digging into the already empty pockets of a tax-payer trying to get more money with which to balance the see-saw by placing it on the income side. Under the cartoon was one line, a question: "Why not try cutting some weight off the other side?" Of the figure termed government overhead.

If every tax-payer could see that cartoon and if every congressman and senator could hear those tax-payers ask, "and why not?" something would happen—something that should happen.
