'Non Coms' Put On "Feed" For Special Guests

Club of Co. K Non-Commissioned Officers Entertain Honorary Members.

Surrounded by a military atmosphere and entertained by excellent music the Non-Commissioned officers club acted host to the honorary members of Co. "K", local National guard unit of the 120th Infantry. The occasion was an informal banquet at the Isaac Shelby hotel last Friday evening at 8:00 o'clock. The banquet was given to show the company's appreciation of the support these men have given the company and also to give these men some idea of the character and ability of the men who form the nucleus around which the company is built.

The affair was a success from every angle. Capt. Peyton McSwain, acting as toastmaster, then explained the purpose of the banquet. He gave a short outline of the company's progress and the plans for future progress. In his talk he stressed the high standing of company "K" among National Guard companies of the state. Of particular interest to the honorary members was the company's favorable comparison to other companies in the state even though the local company received no funds from the city while other cities are furnishing free armories and regular payments each month for their companies to use in better equipping and dressing their men.

Capt. McSwain then called on Dewitt Quinn for some of his experiences as a former member of the company. Mr. Quinn related several really humorous incidents that happened in Camp Glenn during the days that he was a "rookie." Mr. Lon Hamrick followed by expressing his appreciation of the company and its officers.

The value of the company to the order of the city and the county and its vital place in the forces of law and order was described by Sheriff Irvin Allen. He assured the officers and the company that they were well appreciated by himself and his men. Capt. J. Frank Jenkins, a former captain of the company, related some of his experience as head of a company. He then stressed the need of a donation from the city to help carry on the good work of the company. Mr. John Schenck was called on and spoke a few words of appreciation.

He was followed by another former captain, Mr. Frank Roberts. Mr. Roberts urged the company to keep the name it had achieved throughout the state. Capt. McSwain asked Mayor McMurry to speak. The Mayor told of his interest in the company and assured them if it was possible the city would contribute to the company fund. This was well appreciated by the company. Mr. Odus Mull concluded the program by a few words to the company. In his talk he praised the company and its officers. He pointed out the reputation the company had and what this meant to the city and county.

The following honorary members were present: Mayor S. A. McMurry, Aldermen Z. J. Thompson and John Schenck, Sheriff Irvin Allen, J. S. Dorton, R. T. LeGrand, William Crowder, Frank Roberts, John R. McClure, James Elliott, Lon Hamrick, Dewitt Quinn, J. Frank Jenkins and State Democratic Chairman Odus Mull. The following officers and non-commissioned officers were present: Capt. Peyton McSwain, Lieutenants Henry C. Long and Andrew McMurry, First Sgt. Lawrence Ruhnys, Sgts. Loy Huffman, Willie B. Wright, Forrest Warlick, Dick Eaker, Ben P. Wilson, Arthur McKee, Dwella Grant. The Corporals were: Purvis Barrett, Ray Brown, Grady Green, Forest Grayson, Thomas Grigg, Brooks L. Williams, Privates Grant Duncan, Ernest Carter, Clarence Queen, William Huffman and George Weathers.

Break With Roosevelt Reveals Al Smith As Embittered, Less Confident

Seems Less Clear-Headed Than Four Years Ago. Opinions Differ on Break.

Of the break between Al Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt, brought to the front by the Smith speech in Washington last week, the Asheville Citizen says:

"The Richmond News Leader, whose editor evidently attended the Democratic 'harmony' dinner in Washington, tells strikingly of the effect which former Governor Smith's now celebrated speech of Wednesday night made upon at least one of those who were present. Under the heading 'Smith at the Last Ditch,' the News Leader says: 'Al Smith's undisguised attack on Franklin Roosevelt set 1,500 Democrats a-buzzing last night, but it was a pathetic utterance. Smith was introduced by Governor James M. Cox in a very few words. He arose to scant applause. His face was red, his manner was one of suppressed excitement, and though he tried to strike out with his old art, he lacked the punch. In style and in argument, he seemed very different from the Smith of four years ago—older, less clear-headed, less self-confident.'

"There were some in the crowded audience who felt no doubt that if Franklin Roosevelt makes his campaign on the line of argument, he advanced in his rapid address of April 7, he may excite class bitterness. But most of those who are of this mind probably realized last night that Smith was less concerned about avoiding class resentment than about voicing personal resentments. His utterance left the impression on many minds that he knew he had played his cards badly, that he saw he had no hope of the nomination, and that he was determined, as he passed out of the picture, to make one last effort to prevent the nomination of his New York rival."

Apparently Mr. Smith had prepared his speech well in advance and had given it out to the press before he left New York, for in the same issue in which it appeared the New York Times had a long editorial declaring that the Smith utterance "comes to the public like a refreshing breeze in hot air."

The Times, as we have suggested previously, has been veering more and more away from Governor Roosevelt, and it is not surprising therefore to find it maintaining that the Smith speech "injects a virile and incalculable force into the presidential election and promises to redeem it from the influence and lassitude which seemed to be descending upon it."

The writer of the Times editorial could not have been at the Jefferson dinner. The writer of the News Leader article undoubtedly was there.

The News Leader, it may be in order to remark, has not been supporting Roosevelt's nomination but is for Newton D. Baker.

Frank R. Kent, political correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, is an enthusiastic in his praise of the Smith performance as is the New York Times. But the southern newspapers that have been heard from thus far are unanimous in the view that Smith's attack upon Roosevelt was ill-timed and indensible. The Atlanta Constitution, flatly accusing him of being influenced by selfish and ulterior motives, declares that his attitude is devoid of any sense of fair play and will react to his own injury.

The Constitution is strongly for Roosevelt now, but four years ago it supported Smith with equal vigor and fine courage, when to support him in Georgia took some courage.
