TO SEE-SAW

I shall never see you run
Through the orchard any more,
Or hear the scratching of your paws
In early morning at my door.
I shall never watch your tail
Saying you are glad of me,
Or know at meals that your eyes are turned
Upon my plate reproachfully.
I shall never see you sleep
Like a ball curled in the sun,
Or feel your nose pressed in my hand.
Now all your dear dog days are done.
—Rachel Lyman Field.

The bride in the mock wedding was Nellie Webb, small sister of the bride, and the mock groom was L. B. Conner, who acted as maid of honor and best man for Mr. and Mrs. Dover. After all the attendants were assembled on the stage the bride and groom entered and were quietly married by the bride's uncle, Rev. J. W. Ingle.
