Nobody's Business

Synonyms -I wster think the man that who invented the alarm clock was the wonderfullest man in the world but I have changed my mind. The guy who can't take 3 cents worth of sugar and 2 cents worth of chocolate and 1 cent worth of nuts and make a pound of candy and sell it for $1.50 is ont only a genius he's a magician as well -And again, the man or woman who can't use 1 cent's worth of wheat straw and 2 cents worth of ribbon and 3 cents worth of aniline dye and 1 cent's worth of thread and shape the mess into something that resemble a funnel, then mash it on the bottom and squeeze it on on the top and twist it in the middle and call it a "Spring Hat A la Parisienne" and sell it for $19.98, is a miracle and ought to be arrested put in jail.

Furthermore, the trust that can force a farmer to sell "IT", his tobacco, for three cents a pound, strip it from the stems, mellow (?) it in ultra violet rays and sell it for 2 weeks in a hoghead, wrap a little skin of white tissue paper around it and sell it back to the farmer under the name of cigarette..... for 3 dollars a pound is a most remarkable organization... and should be loved by all whom it robs. We must trust the trusts.

Yet the politician—the selfmade politician—raised between the corn rows (pumpkin-like) the poor man's friend... the famous bill killer... the savior of the country... the gentleman who makes the tax laws, but pays no taxes... the tax-reducer and the expense booster... is a great man while he's running for office and an airbag after he's elected. ...Still... we vote for him and tear our shirts for him, and hope, mebbe finally, at last, possibly... we have elected the right man, but he, like most of the others, proves to be a dud when he falls amidst the lobbyists.

Our railroads are now going (?) after business in a big, competitive way. Some of them are making rates so low that the buses can't even crank up and start for such fares. Why, folks, some of these railroads will let you ride on their trains for almost nothing... provided... of course... that you leave home tonight, ride, all night... not get off when you get there, and come back the next night. You can ride on Saturday and Sunday powerful cheap... if you don't act a fool and go over 150 miles away from home. If you do that, you must pay regular fare. Yes sir, Susie; if you'll just ride the trains when it aint convenient for you to go and come, you can sure save money.

Wanted: Some Real He-men. Certain political bodies seem to think that they have cut expenses. What little they have actually done is just about like blowing the foam off of a schooner of beer. But one thing is certain, they have not reduced the tax levy.

Uncle Sam seems to be hard up too. It aint nice to say he's busted, and even if he is busted, he aint like you and me: he has 121,467,876 friends that he can call on for help and get it. And he'll be calling pretty soon with his new tax bill, so get ready.

I can't say that I believe that the present stock of public servants (?) intend to help get our taxes down. If they fall to do so in 2 or 3 years it is possible that Mr. A. Citizen will go on a strike and not pay any more taxes until he knows what's going to be done with his dough. He does not know this now.

Personally and confidentially, I sincerely believe that our state and federal governments could spend between 40 and 50 per cent less in running our affairs and not hurt anybody except our grafters an ttituckers and over-paid employes. It's nice to borrow and spend and then borrow again and spend... but old Man Payday bobs up ever and anon... and he's bobbed something terrible here of late.

The waste of money and supplies in some political enterprises is terrible. Private business methods could be introduced in 75 per cent on our departments and do all the work for half the money... in one-third of the time. The first thing we need to eliminate is that "PRIVATE" sign on so many doors... much of our past troubles is too much privacy. The only gavel train I know of now is the political vestibule that has only 4 seats, one for me and my wife and my son John and his wife... 4 and no more. Amen, Amen.

We have 2 southern states, North Carolina and Alabama by name, that are really bent on cutting down, straightening up and paying out. Some of the leaders in those states have begun to call a spade a spade and if you don't mind, they'll be calling a shovel a spade before it's over. They know that they have been headed toward ruin for several years, and that's why they are flagging. Some of our other states are talking and talking about getting their budgets balanced.

There's one thing I believe I know and that's this: farmers and merchants and cotton mills and other business folks are getting tired of paying their good money out and not getting much in return for it. It's going to take lots of careful weeding to "make our paths straight," but this has got to be done either by fair means or foul means... and the voters are going to be the choosers. Sorry about this piece; but it's off my system now.

Ehringhaus In Lead Is Belief Of Leaders Now

Support Of MacLean And Anti-Land-Tax Faction Aids Him In Race.

Raleigh, April 25.—Friends of J. C. B. Ehringhaus are more confident than ever that he will win the Democratic nomination for governor or at least be high man in the first primary ever since Angus D. H. MacLean, of Washington, Beaufort county, and patron saint of eastern North Carolina Democrats, announced that he had decided to support Ehringhaus. They also point out that Lindsay Warren, congressman from the first district, Hallet S. (Hot Stuff) Ward, also of Washington, who was a member of the 1931 state senate, and others of political potency and influence in the east, are active supporting Ehringhaus.

Some even go so far as to maintain that the support for MacLean, for Ehringhaus is almost equivalent to his gaining the support of Josephus Daniels, one time navy secretary and present editor and publisher of The Raleigh News and Observer. For it is pointed out that Daniels has probably never put his stamp of approval upon anyone in North Carolina so wholeheartedly as he put it upon MacLean during the 1931 general assembly, when he put the full force of his own personality and influence of his newspaper back of MacLean in his fight to gain full state support of the six months school term without any ad valorem tax for schools and to compel the enactment of a sales tax. It is also believed that Daniels regarded MacLean as more nearly representing his own ideas and policies and as the best fitted candidate for governor—after he had decided not to become a candidate. Now that MacLean has put his stamp of approval upon Ehringhaus, a great many regard it as almost equivalent to an endorsement by Daniels, because of Daniels' well known regard for MacLean's judgment and opinion in matters political.

As a result of these facts, there is no doubt that in the eastern counties where MacLean, Daniels, Ward and the North Carolina Taxpayers association have been the political dictators since before the 1931 general assembly and where thousands who have heretofore paid no taxes are still clamoring to be permitted to pay a sales tax, Ehringhaus has made inroads gains the past week. These gains have extended down into R. Gibson county, where the fire-eating and rantankerous property tax reductionist and erstwhile potential candidate for governor, Tom McNeill, recently took Ehringhaus over the county personally.

Ex-Kaiser May Reside in U. S. Territory

Exiled Emperor of Germany, Needing Change of Climate, May Accept Hospitality Offered by Virgin Islands' Civic Organizations.

GOVERNOR PEARSON

MAP SHOWING LOCATION OF ISLANDS

EX-KAISER WILHELM and WIFE.

Following press dispatches revealing that physicians attending former Kaiser Wilhelm, of Germany, in Doorn, Holland, suggest that an indeterminate stay in the West Indies would be extremely advisable, two civic organizations of St. Thomas, capital of the islands, have forwarded invitations to the exiled monarch to accept hospitality at that department. However, it is unlikely that the ex-Kaiser would consent to putting so much distance between himself and the country that was once the theatre of his glories. He is fairly well content at Doorn, where he leads the simple life of a country gentleman, keeping fit by working around his estate, chopping wood and engaging in other manual chores. Though it is still a firmly entrenched belief in Germany that Wilhelm would welcome a chance to return to the helm of state, the ex-Kaiser's attitude in the recent elections does much to brand the belief a fallacy. It is reported that had not Wilhelm vetoed the idea, both Adolf Hitler and President Paul von Hindenburg would have withdrawn from the presidential race and left a clear field for the former Crown Prince as the first step toward restoring the Hohenzollern dynasty. Though it is still a matter of conjecture as to the royal exile's reaction to the Virgin Islanders' invitation, it would be strange if he were to take refuge in a territory controlled by the United States, which more than any other allied nation is responsible for his being an "ex."

Tuberculosis in Children May Exist Unsuspected

This Malady, Essentially a Disease of Youth, in Many Cases Can Be Discovered Only by X-Ray and Skin Tests, Since It Often Gives No Outward Sign.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D. United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

THERE is something in the human heart that makes everybody resent an attack upon the happiness of childhood. We are eager to have the little ones well and joyful. If they are sick and depressed, the zest of life is gone. But they do get sick. Tuberculosis, for instance, is essentially a disease of youth. It may attack those farther along in life, but not nearly so often as it strikes the young people. I am sorry to say that even babies are not exempt.

Tuberculosis in children is by no means the frankly apparent disease found in adults. In children it is easy to overlook it. Even careful examination of the chest may reveal no abnormal physical signs. It is only when the X-ray is employed and one of the skin tests is given that the case can be positively recognized as tuberculosis. By far the larger number of children who contract tuberculosis do so by contact with persons suffering from lung trouble. Again and again parents have denied this, and apparently in good faith. They have insisted that the child has never associated with a victim of tuberculosis, yet X-ray examination of members of the household has shown diseased
