

Shelby Juniors Win Game; Play Gastonia Friday

Local Legion youngsters defeated Cherryville Team By Score Of 3 To 2.

In a closely-fought contest the American Legion junior baseball team of Shelby defeated the Cherryville juniors here Wednesday afternoon by one score, 3-2.

The game was for only seven frames and the opposing hurlers came up only five hits each.

Play Gastonia Here. Friday afternoon at 3:30 the Legion youngsters will play the strong Gastonia Legion team here.

The Shelby outfit is a remarkably good club to be composed of such young lads and local baseball enthusiasts are missing a treat when they do not see the boys in action. Friday's game should be one of the best of the season.

Kale and Davis. Kale, first-sacker, and Davis, pitcher, were the hitting stars in the victory over Cherryville. Davis helped with his own game by driving out two hits and scoring two runs. Kale secured two hits and scored one run.

Ehringhaus Says Farmer, Workingman Must Have A Fair Deal Before Prosperity Will Return To Country

Winston-Salem, May 17.—Speaking before a large audience here last night in a speech that was broadcast, J. C. B. Ehringhaus said in part:

"Every state and every nation on the globe is today struggling with identical social and economic problems that agitate the public mind in North Carolina. Governments everywhere are groping in darkness, seeking in vain to find a ray of light that will lead to a brighter day. I have the profound conviction that there is a way out. First, governments, businesses and individuals must adopt a program of rigid economy. Second, the unnecessary and superfluous will have to go but this alone will not suffice to save. It is possible to cut to a point where the patient bleeds to death. It is preposterous to think that the people of this nation can go forward without a quick revival in agriculture and industry—the fundamental of national prosperity and the basis of all enterprise. As evidence of this realization, all the candidates for governor and the best political thought in this state are committed to the removal of the 15c tax levy on property for the support of the public school. This tax relief is but a just admission of the dire distress of real estate and yet when we analyze this relief we find that it only amounts to a saving of a dollar and a half in taxes on every thousand dollars worth of property listed for taxes. That is not enough. We must do more.

"I feel one great handicap in this campaign. I do not know how to fight a Democrat. I am proud of the Democratic party in North Carolina and its long and sustained service to the people of this state. I would suffer defeat before I would let my record of achievement, or misrepresentation the motives of its trusted leaders.

"We must reduce taxes in every possible way. We must cut the cost of government to actual necessities. We must discontinue every non-essential public service, and yet I tell you after all this has been done we have but scratched the surface of our economic ills. If we were to levy no taxes at all, discontinue all public service, close our schools and colleges, and revert to the primitive state, the people of this country would inevitably fall into bankruptcy if agriculture and industry continue in its present state of prostration and ruin. In other words, we are never going to move out of the present economic depths as long as eight million Americans walk the streets in idleness, as long as factories can find no markets, as long as the farmers of this county are compelled to sell their tobacco at prevailing prices, their cotton below the cost of production, their corn at 25c a bushel, their wheat at 30c a bushel, peanuts at 1 1/2-2c a pound, and their truck and live stock at prices that fall to supply the bare necessities of life. The Way to Cut. "To my mind there is only one way out, and that is for this nation to elect a Democratic president and a Democratic congress on a liberal tariff platform that will cut the barbed wire entanglements now denying the American farmer and American workman his just participation in the markets of the world. Every nation has erected barriers against the products of the United States as a retaliation against its selfishness and misguidance. The industries of this country are moving to other nations to escape the iniquity of privilege and tariff taxation.

"Give this nation a liberal leadership, with a democratic concept of foreign and domestic trade, and in my judgment the light of prosperity will come again and North Carolina and this nation will move from the darkness of privilege and monopoly into the dawn of the light that brightened this world under the glow of the leadership of Woodrow Wilson.

"I come fresh from the people and I know full well of the hardships they are now enduring. I have no illusions about the power and influence of the governor's office; nor with respect to the difficulties which face the next governor of North Carolina. I would not have the people of North Carolina think that I am a miracle man, but it would be the proudest achievement of my life to have them know what is really in my heart—a sincere and honest conviction that I can serve them openly, freely, unselfishly and helpfully. Here in North Carolina there may be those who are being deceived and misled by a mirage of despair and ruin. I do not minimize our present plight, but all of the faith that's in me rises up in rebellion against the suggestion that North Carolina is bankrupt and all of its people impotent to fight off the calamity of the moment. Our great Christian civilization will not pass out of existence as long as we maintain the faith of our fathers, the courage of our race, and the hope of our religion.

Campaigning On Public Time For Office Is Talked

Files Show Maxwell Doing What He Refused To Permit Silver To Do.

(Star News Bureau.) Raleigh, May 20.—The principle of an incumbent running for office to succeed himself and devoting some time to his campaign is, of course well established in North Carolina. Also, since the late Chief Justice Walter Clark ran for the United States Senate some 20 years ago, the practice that a man holding office may aspire to another and make his campaign without resigning, has been followed.

But, before this campaign is over the question will be asked, publicly, to what extent a candidate for one office, while holding another State position, may utilize his office force in carrying on his campaign—to what extent he may make use of office force and facilities of the State for making a race for office, which office, while public and possibly pro bono publico, also carries with it personal ambition.

Allen J. Maxwell, commissioner of revenue and candidate for governor, will probably be the most direct object of such questions. He has established a headquarters and much of his political matter is issued from it. He is chairman of the tax commission, of which Dr. Fred W. Morrison is executive secretary, and has, of course, figures compiled by the commission available. To what extent he is thus aided will probably come to the front before June 4.

Moreover, newspaper files reveal the attitude of Mr. Maxwell toward members of his staff taking part in political campaigns in his statement requiring the late Major Sprague Silver, director of the Motor Vehicle Bureau, to give up the Fourth district campaign management for Senator Simmons in 1930. After expressing his admiration and friendship for Senator Simmons, to show it was not personal, Mr. Maxwell added: "my sole purpose is to maintain the orderly operation of this department in the performance of its public duties."

Then Mr. Maxwell said: "It is the business of this department to manage the State's business with respect to collection of its revenue, and no engagements will be permitted that tend to neglect or embarrass that business. It is expected and desired that all employees of the department shall exercise their own best judgment in support of candidates in contests between Democrats, but such activities as responsibilities of campaign management will inevitably impair efficiency and tend to convert division offices, supported by all the tax payers for public business, into campaign headquarters, and the acceptance of such responsibilities cannot be approved, except under leave of absence for the period of the campaign.

Congress Wants View Of Pres. Hoover On Prohibition Question

Washington, May 19.—The prohibition question was thrust at the White House today with the introduction of a resolution in the house calling upon President Hoover to inform congress as to his views and recommendations on the subject.

The measure was introduced by Representative Romjue (D), Mo., and came close behind a statement by Representative Britten (R), Ill., anti-prohibitionists, that the Republican platform drafted at Chicago would include a wet plank.

"I want to know how the President stands on this troublesome problem of prohibition," Romjue said. "It has been working unsatisfactorily for both sides, and congress is entitled to know Mr. Hoover's views and recommendations on how to handle it."

Watching Washington

Washington.—Angry utterances, perhaps induced mainly by election worries, and frayed nerves, are frequent in congress during these days of strife and strain.

But members sometimes find themselves hampered to the point of exasperation. Formal rules are invoked to prevent them from calling each other hasty names and, despite their immunity from the legal consequences of anything they say on the floor, the dictates of expediency are even forcing them to moderate the language they use toward ordinary citizens.

Unhappy Huey. Witness the unhappy plight of Senator Huey Long, the Louisiana "kingfish," who was told that he couldn't say Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas, his own party's floor leader, was influenced in his votes by his corporation law clients.

They pulled Paragraph Two of Rule XIX on Huey, reading as follows: "No senator in debate shall, directly or indirectly by any form of words impute to another senator or to other senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a senator."

That's a funny rule in more ways than one, but Huey had to sit down until someone—it was John Blaine of Wisconsin—made a special motion allowing him to resume.

A "Harsh" Word. Meanwhile, Congressman Fiorello H. LaGuardia, the New York insurgent, was being asked to expunge from a committee record the word "contemptible" which he had applied to President E. L. Cord of the Century Air Lines in connection with a pilots' strike following pay cuts.

Chairman Sam Rayburn of the House Interstate Commerce committee begged LaGuardia to strike out the "harsh word" because, he said, when another gent had been similarly criticized previously "the committee had to hear him for two days." That seems to be the citizen's flat method of retaliation at attacks from congress.

But what really creates complicated commission is a razzberry tossed by a representative at a senator, or vice versa. One calls attention to the recent exchange of puns between the peppery little Senator Carter Glass of Virginia and the ex-prizefighting congressman, Fred Britten of Illinois.

The Glass Charge. The house sputtered in anger when Glass charged that some Chicago bankers had nixed one of its members to oppose branch banking provisions of the McFadden bill some years ago.

But it spent half an hour arguing whether Britten could be permitted to quote the Glass charges from the Congressional Record or even make any specific reference to them.

Browning of Tennessee, who was in the chair, cited a ruling that no member of the house might in any way reflect on anything a senator or the senate said or did. He ruled that this prevented a member reading from anything that went in the Record from the senate, that if a senator called a member of the house a thief the speech must be referred to in the House, that if a senator accused every house member of taking bribes the representative could not call the slander to the country's attention from the floor.

"Saw It In The Papers." The theory of such rulings, as promulgated by the late Speaker Longworth, is that friendly relations between the two branches and the members must be "enforced with the utmost rigidity."

So Britten denounced the Glass charges simply as something he had read in the newspapers. Shafer of Wisconsin asked him if he were "criticizing newspapermen for correctly reporting a statement made on the floor of a supposedly great legislative body by a politician who holds public office," whereupon the house applauded and Britten apologized to—or, rather, eulogized—the newspapers.

Obviously, such circumlocutions hamper a man who wants to say what he thinks. But Britten referred to the Glass charges as a "dastardly lie"—and he couldn't have got away with that had he been admittedly talking about a senator.

As sort of a capping of the climax, still further accentuating the difficulties of congressional nomenclature, Britten took the two words "Dastardly Lie" out of the Record, substituting the words "not the truth." Glass, meanwhile, had said he could prove the charge, that the culprit was dead, that he would produce proof if Britten or any other member cared to take responsibility for making him do so. That seems to have been the end of that.

Senate Votes Down Legalized Beer. Washington, May 18.—The senate today refused to legalize beer. The first senate roll calls for beer since prohibition brought overwhelming defeat.

The main vote was on an amendment by Senator Tydings of Maryland, to the revenue bill to legalize 2.75 beer and tax it 24 cents a gallon to help finance a $1,500,000,000 public construction program.

Just previously the senate had turned down—80 to 23—a proposal by Bingham, Republican of Connecticut to alter the Tydings amendment to make it allow four per cent alcoholic content.

MELLOWED A HUNDRED MILLION YEARS

While monsters muddied PENNSYLVANIA waters

SINCLAIR Pennsylvania Motor Oil is an outstanding example of what Nature and man working together can produce in a perfect automobile lubricant. What did Nature do? Back in the Devonian Age, a hundred million years ago, she deposited in the Bradford-Allegheny District of the Pennsylvania field the raw materials for Bradford-Allegheny crude oil. And excellent materials they must have been for today Bradford-Allegheny crude oil commands the highest price of all Pennsylvania grade crudes!

What does man do? In the great Sinclair refinery at Wellsville, N. Y., is machinery covered with ice and frost. This is the refrigerating apparatus by which Sinclair chills Bradford-Allegheny crude down to as low as 60° F. below zero. At this low point, the non-lubricating petroleum jelly in the oil congeals and is removed by separating machinery. Thus you are assured that the full, rich body of Sinclair Pennsylvania will not turn water-thin in engine heat.

Test the truth of this with a crankcaseful of Sinclair Pennsylvania. Note how the oil stands up in the heat of fast driving. Observe at draining time, how little oil has been used up—positive, visible proof of protection for the last mile as well as the first!

Note: For those who prefer a Mid-continent oil we also sell Sinclair Opaline, blended from the oldest Mid-continent crudes, de-waxed and also freed from petroleum jelly.

Dance Planned At New Armory Here

A great treat is in store for Shelby dancers on Saturday night. There will be a dance at the remodeled company K armory and the oft-talked of Hoz Hendrick and his Trouble Chasers will furnish the music. To many this means nothing but to many more who have danced to the music of this famous crew of radio entertainers it will be considered a rare treat. They have consented to make their initial appearance at a Shelby dance after much persuasion. The dance starts at 8 and continues till the last couple is off the floor. A large crowd is expected and arrangements have been made for accommodating this crowd.
