Hound Of Heaven A lady living in the Grammarly Park section was walking home from a friend's house in the neighborhood the other evening, when suddenly, traversing a dark cross-street she became aware that a man was following her. She hurried a little faster, but, glancing cautiously over her shoulder she saw that the man was coming faster still—was, in fact, overtaking her. Just short of her own apartment house doorway he caught up with her. "Take this," he told her in a hoarse voice, and shoved a folded piece of paper into her hands. She took it and, still frozen with fear, darted into the house and bolted the door. Then, after she had taken a deep breath, she looked at the paper. It read: "Jesus Loves You."

Mr. Loy Picks Flaws In Sales Tax Plan To Restore Prosperity With $50 Gift To Each Person In U. S.

To the Editor of the Cleveland Star. If you will permit me space in your paper I would like to make a few statements in regards to the proposed plan of having the United States Government give every person within this country $50. The idea of getting $50 without doing anything for its appeals, to me, I could use the $50 very easily, but I am afraid that the plan that some unidentified person has thought out would not be practical.

For instance we should consider that: 1. It is impossible to give a person something which you do not have. The United States does not have the six billion dollars it would take to start the plan, and the distribution of such money would be nothing more than restoring to a form of fiat money. History shows that in every instance where a country has restored to fiat money, it has tended to weaken that country rather than strengthen it.

2. The proponent of the plan seems to have overlooked the fact that we have as much money today as we had when times were good. There are just as many paper dollars, just as many silver dollars, and just as much gold as there ever has been. We do not need more money, but we need to increase the circulation of that we already have. A three cent tax on a dollar every time it changes hands will tend to decrease the rapidity with which this money will change hands rather than increase it.

3. It is impossible to have two different kinds of money in circulation without having one kind of money drive the other kind out of circulation. Our present money would drive the money that required a stamp on it out of existence. If you went to the bank to get a check cashed you would ask for the money that did not require a stamp on it in order to save money. Our banks would be full of this "Stamp" money and would not be able to dispose of it.

4. However here is the real weak point. The originator says that this $50 is not a gift from the government, but rather a loan, which will eventually be paid back in the form of the stamps. When you loan anyone anything you naturally expect that person to pay it back? But who is going to bear the burden of this loan? Here is a farmer that doesn't handle money very often. He has a wife and eight children. The government would have to give him $500. Now how much of that $500 would he pay back to the government. Suppose he was heavily in debt. He would take the $500 and pay his debts. The stamps would amount to $15. The farmer pays his debts, goes back home, and possibly doesn't handle the money any more until it goes out of existence. He borrowed $500 from the government and paid back $15, who is going to bear the burden of the other $485?

5. It is said that as the money changes hands the government will start collecting it back in the form of stamps. But I say the money will not start circulating. What would you do with your $50? If you were wise you would go to the bank, place $1.50 in stamps on the money and get it changed. Then as you spent the money you would not be bothered with the stamps. In your business dealing you would avoid the use of the "Stamp" money. So would everyone else. bank once, get $48.50 in change and I would take the money to the refuse to accept any more of the money from anyone. The banks would be full of the money, and their only possible source of getting rid of it would be through the Federal Reserve. They would stamp it and pass it on. The Federal Reserve could not get rid of it except through returning it to the United States Treasury, so they would stamp it and pass it on. When it reaches the Treasury it would stop. Instead of being stamped 35 times it would only have been stamped three times: Instead of having the original $50 in the Treasury we would have $4.50.

6. Another weak point in the theory is, "How are you going to make individuals stamp the money every time it changes hands?" How are you going to prevent one individual who owes another individual from paying him without stamping the money? Why couldn't he pay him when no one was around, and by mutual agreement leave off the stamp?

7. Lets assume you could figure out some way to keep the money in circulation. I don't believe it could be done, but lets assume it could be. Who is going to bear the burden of that other $485 that the farmer did not pay? As individuals do not handle money very much the merchants will naturally have to assume the burden. Here's an example. Mr. Smith walks into a hardware store owned by Mr. Jones. He buys 10¢ worth of nails, and as he does not have the change he gives him

Torture Victim?

"I didn't mind the chain so much, but I didn't get out to play. Just the chain rattlin' and bangin' all day long." That is how 12-year-old Paul Fiest (above) of St. Clairsville, Ohio, described his three months of periodical chaining in his darkened bedroom. His father is being held in jail, pending an investigation of the alleged cruelty.

Dawes Returns To Home, Private Life

Tells Reporters He Has Been Away "Hell Of A Long Time Now."

Washington, June 20.—Charles Gates Dawes slipped quietly into private life at 4:05 p. m. Friday by getting into the wrong Pullman and then complaining, "It was too damned cold," anyway.

Wearing a double-breasted light grey suit, plain dark blue tie, wingtip collar and a drooping Panama hat, Dawes was in a gay mood as he awaited the departure of the train that was to carry him back to Chicago.

His queer, underslung pipe burned furiously as the explosive and dynamic Dawes expressed his happiness at leaving government cares behind. "I'm darned glad to get back to private business and to my family," he told the United Press correspondent. "I've been away eight years now. That's a hell of a long time, young fellow. I've wanted to return to Chicago and Evanston for a long time. That's why I quit my post as Ambassador to Great Britain."

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Christie Waddell Jenkins, and two sisters, Mrs. Bessie Ramsaur, Lincolnton and Mrs. W. A. Pressley, Rock Hill S. C. A Rotten Sermon

A bishop was eating dinner with his host before the afternoon service at which he was to speak. He ate little or nothing, explaining that it was not good for a preacher to eat heavily before a sermon. The housewife could not attend the service, as she had to stay at home and prepare supper. When her husband came home she said, "Well, how was he?" The husband, drawing a sigh, replied: "He might just as well have eaten."

one of the "Stamps" dollars. This means that the nails will cost him $13. But Mr. Jones is going to have to dispose of the dollar, and in doing so it is going to cost him 3¢. He made 2¢ on the nails and had to pay three cents for handling the money. He would soon get rich at that rate. Jones takes the dollar and buys a sack of flour from Brown next door. An hour later Brown needs a rake and brings the dollar back as payment for the rake. Later Jones has to have some sugar, so he returns the dollar again. Possibly the shell will have several transactions during the day with that dollar. That means that at the end of the day they have had to pay 30 or 40¢ for the privilege of handling one dollar. Heaven help the poor merchant under such a plan. MILTON C. LOY.

Smile, Depression Graduates! Faces May Be Your Fortunes

Slump Has Hit Erudition, But Fame and Fortune Await Possessors of Proper Type of Masculine Beauty.

One cannot eat a diploma, nor does the privilege of wearing a couple of letters at the back of one's name help much when shoes begin to turn over at the heels. A great many graduates from colleges and universities will recognize the sad truth of that statement before long. However, there is one field where golden opportunity awaits young men of the proper type. That is the business, or should we say art, of modeling. Take the case of Jack Boyle, a graduate of the 1928 class of Fordham University. Jack wanted to be a doctor, but prosperity skipped into hiding around that corner and he became a job hunter. Apart for his varsity education—which he found useless—Jack's only asset was his manly beauty and of this asset he made such good use that he is today on top of the world. His face looks out at millions all over the world from advertisements of a well-known collar manufacturing company and the demand for his services keeps him pretty busy and his bank balance growing. Another young man who capitalized upon his masculine pulchritude is Walter Thornton, whose career as a bricklayer was ended by the depression. Walter's services are so much sought that he has had hundreds of plaster casts made of his perfect head, which he sells to artists and illustrators. Modeling is a stepping stone to movie stardom for Neil Hamilton, the publicity he received via the advertising posters having attracted the attention of Hollywood film scouts. So, graduates, look in the mirror and if you bear any resemblance to Johnny Weissmuller, aquatic and film star, who is regarded as the perfect type, there is a chance that you may overcome the handicap of a college education and be a success—depression regarded.

Even Mild Cases of Scarlet Fever Are Very Contagious

Great Increase of Cases in Recent Months Makes It Highly Important That Every Patient Be Quarantined and Given Proper Treatment.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D. United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

THERE has been an alarming increase in the number of cases of scarlet fever reported from all over the country within the past few months. Fortunately, most of the cases were of a mild form.

Scarlet fever is a highly contagious disease. It is often neglected and in this way is quickly spread from one child to another. Quarantine is necessary for all cases. Children who recover from scarlet fever should not be permitted to return to school without presentation of a physician's certificate.

The disease comes on suddenly and the first symptoms noted are vomiting, sore throat, headache and fever. The rash of scarlet fever appears within twenty-four hours and is first seen on the neck and upper part of the chest. It is bright red in color and gradually spreads over the entire body. The rash lasts from three to ten days and then fades. After this the skin peels in scales. Mild cases of scarlet fever require little treatment besides rest in bed and isolation; but besides bear in mind that mild cases are quite as contagious as severe cases. Throat?

Use of the Dick Test. Large quantities of water should be taken. It may be given in the form of lemonade or orangeade. Liquid foods, such as milk, are best tolerated in the beginning of the disease. Later, cereals and broths may be added to the diet. Daily elimination is important and where necessary, enemas should be given. When the fever has subsided and desquamation has taken place, sponge baths containing bicarbonate of soda are beneficial and relieve the itching. The quarantine should not be lifted until desquamation is completed and there are no abnormal discharges from the mouth, nose or ears. Considerable research work is being done to find an injection which will give immunization, or protection, against scarlet fever. Similar to the "Dick test" in diphtheria, the "Dick test" determines whether or not an individual is susceptible to scarlet fever. If your child has not received this test, consult with your physician or the local board of health.
