Honey Bees Making Home Brew Liquid

Burlington.—Andrew Leath, a dry of desert aridity, is worried about his bees. They are industriously manufacturing home-brew honey.

Mr. Leath is more than a temperate man, his friends say, and it is needless to question what he says.

During the spring and summer months when the flowers are blooming he enjoys watching his bees work, just as he enjoyed in years gone by the sparks from the white iron he fashioned at his trade. His bees have worked hard this summer. One day he took a look to see how much honey was in storage.

"It was black. It smelled like home-brew. It tasted like home-brew. It is unfit for anything," Mr. Leath said.

Mr. Leath believes that his bees are foraging some place where home brew slops are poured out, returning home loaded with supplies that simply ruin their effort. He is considering selling his bees, unless they quit the homebrew racket, for he will have nothing to do with it and doesn't want his hives "pinched" for violation of the Volstead law.

Economist States Country On "Dole"

Babson Declares Politicians Benefit From "Relief Racket" And Wants Attention On Men.

Silver Bay, N. Y., July 22.—Describing "all politicians high and low" as the chief beneficiaries of the "relief racket," yesterday told members of the Silver Bay institute that the United States today is as much on a dole as England and asserted that until public attention is focused on men instead of money, "the world will continue to suffer."

"Money," said Mr. Babson, "will no more succeed in getting us out of the depression than it succeeded in keeping us out. Nor does the solution lie in building more non-productive public works, but in getting the unemployed back to their old productive jobs."

"Organized relief," he said, "is benefitting the politician more than the distressed unemployed. It is the biggest racket in the country and all politicians high and low are its chief beneficiaries."

Mr. Babson urged a "quota plan" for bringing business back to normal and pointed out "the real task" was to balance production and consumption so as to get everyone back to work. He said a simple remedy would be to quota the unemployed against employers and those already employed.

"This could be done," he said, "by having each community budget the number of its unemployed and quota them among corporations, partnerships, families and individuals at a wage to be fair to all parties concerned. This would be only the reverse of wartime practice—drafting men into industry instead of out of it."

Blind Man Now Sees But Questions Worth

Earl Musselman, On First Trip To New York, Acquired New Fear

New York, July 20. — In some ways Earl Musselman is worse off now that he can see, than he was when he was blind.

The 23-year-old Allentown, Penn., youth was given 30 per cent sight in one eye by the creation of an artificial pupil a year ago during an exceptional operation in Philadelphia.

This week he was in New York for the first time since he has grown accustomed to seeing things. While gazing at the wonders of skyscrapers, subways and ships, he explained the tremendous handicap which now faces him.

He has lost the ways of the blind, and still has not yet gained the confidence of vision. When he adventured forth into New York as a blind youth, he came alone. This time his uncle, D. W. Laubach, Philadelphia optometrist, guided him by the elbow.

"Before I was able to see," Musselman said, "I had no fear of going anywhere. I always went alone. I could guide myself by feel and my sense of direction."

"But after I was able to see I got afraid. I could see how fast automobiles and street cars went. Ever since then some one has had to go with me and lead me when I go out into the streets."

Fearing it would be years before he gained full confidence in his new power, Musselman was worried about an occupation. James H. O'Donnell, a showman and brother-in-law of Con Colleano, famous tight rope walker, who had been brought up in Allentown, came to the rescue.

He knew Musselman played the saxophone, and that he had had two pals in the Overbrook, Penn., institute for the blind who also played musical instruments.

So the two blind youths, Ralph Sterner and Charles Lichtenwalner, and the youth who now sees, formed a musical trio.

That is what brought Musselman to this city of wonders, the speed of which terrifies him.

Tar Heel Wins Scribner Prize For Best Novel

Thomas Wolfe, Young Asheville Writer, Gets Second Award. Lives In Brooklyn.

North Carolina friends of Thomas Wolfe, Asheville young man now teaching in New York City, who two or three years ago achieved national reputation through the publication of his novel "Look Homeward Angel," learned last week that Mr. Wolfe had won one of the greatest literary honors of the year through the award to him of $5,000 offered by Scribners in their best novel of the year contest. The title is "A Portrait of Bascom Hawke."

Mr. Wolfe is a graduate of the University of North Carolina in the class of 1920 and has many friends and former school mates in the state. His first novel, "Look Homeward Angel," came near winning the Pulitzer prize for the best novel by an American author the year it was published. It earned a large sale and brought to Mr. Wolfe the mention of his name by Sinclair Lewis in accepting the Nobel prize at Stockholm as one of the truly important young-literary figures of our day.

The scene of the book was in Asheville principally, while other scenes were at Chapel Hill, Durham, Raleigh, and other places in the state, and the characters were drawn from relatives of Mr. Wolfe and others with whom he had been closely associated. The characters were so thinly veiled that the book caused quite a furore at Asheville when it was first released.

Seek To Settle Large Estate Of Smith Reynolds

Musical Revue Star's Father Sends Request To Co-Guardian Of Dead Youth.

Winston-Salem.—Libby Holman, widow of Smith Reynolds, has asked his uncle, W. N. Reynolds, to be executor of his estate.

Alfred Holman, Cincinnati attorney and father of the musical revue star who left Broadway to become the bride of the tobacco fortune heir, transmitted the request in a letter to Reynolds, who disclosed it here.

Reynolds' disclosure was prompted by reports current here that a New York legal firm had been appointed executor of the estate.

He said that so far as he knew there was no truth in the report. Informed of the report in Cincinnati, Holman said:

"I am my daughter's only attorney."

The elder Reynolds was co-guardian of his 20-year-old nephew with R. E. Lasater of Winston-Salem.

Reynolds Was Minor. Young Smith Reynolds, shot to death on a sleeping porch of his home here two weeks ago, was a minor when he died. Eight years hence he would have received a share of his late father's estate, estimated at around $15,000,000.

The young aviator's personal fortune was relatively small. A court fight may be necessary to determine if the former Libby Holman has claim to dower rights in the $15,000,000 or in her husband's personal fortune.

Attorneys here have said that if Mrs. Reynolds has a child, which friends say she is expecting, it could share in the inheritance along with Reynolds' child by a former marriage.

Meantime no legal steps have been taken here looking towards a disposition of the estate.

Has 30 Days. Mrs. Reynolds has 30 days from the date of her husband's death to apply for a letter of consent to act as executor. After 30 days, other members of the Reynolds family can apply.

The matter must remain open for 20 days after application is made. The Reynolds shooting claimed national attention for more than a week after the wealthy young playboy was found dying from a bullet wound at his home here.

After officially recording the death as a suicide, Coroner W. N. Dalton summoned a jury and ordered an inquest. The jury held that Reynolds came to his death at the hands of a person or persons unknown.

Mrs. Reynolds, bride of only a few months, figured prominently in the testimony and several times was subjected to grueling examination.

Since the inquest she has been in seclusion at a sister's home near Cincinnati.
